FROM: OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:
DECEMBER 22, 1969

Governor Richard J. Hughes today signed the following bills:

Assembly Bill No. 367 -- which requires every constable to file with the governing body which appointed him, a monthly report of his official activities other than those connected with court or judicial proceedings. This monthly report is to be forwarded by the governing body to the municipal chief of police. The office of any constable who fails to file such a report for two consecutive months is to be deemed vacant by the governing body.

This bill is designed to promote the accountability of constables and should further the coordination of their activities with the operation of local law enforcement agencies. The burden placed on the individual constable by this requirement is a negligible one and one which should assist the constable in organizing and exercising his functions.

Assembly Bill No. 696 -- which provides for the uniform administration of the alternate programs of benefits for certain members of the faculty and other eligible employees of the New Jersey College of Medicine and Dentistry, Rutgers, the State University of New Jersey, the Newark College of Engineering, the Department of Higher Education, and the State and county colleges.

Assembly Bill No. 771 -- which amends the Act passed in 1968 permitting the employment and vocational training of certain prisoners confined in County institutions. The amendment gives the assignment judge of the county within which a work release program has been instituted by the Freeholders the authority to order an individual's participation in such a program. Present law gives only the judge imposing sentence on the individual the power to order the individual's involvement in a work release program.
