

25:1-10

LEGISLATIVE HISTORY CHECKLIST
Compiled by the NJ State Law Library

(Transactions in writing)

SA: 25:1-10

LAWS OF: 1995 CHAPTER: 360

BILL NO: A1550 (Substituted for S1034)

SPONSOR(S): Corodemus

DATE INTRODUCED: March 15, 1994

COMMITTEE: ASSEMBLY Judiciary, Law & Public Safety
SENATE: Judiciary

AMENDED DURING PASSAGE: Yes Amendments during passage
First reprint enacted denoted by superscript numbers

DATE OF PASSAGE: ASSEMBLY: January 10, 1995
SENATE: December 18, 1995

DATE OF APPROVAL: January 5, 1996

FOLLOWING STATEMENTS ARE ATTACHED IF AVAILABLE:

SPONSOR STATEMENT: Yes

COMMITTEE STATEMENT: ASSEMBLY: Yes
SENATE: Yes

FISCAL NOTE: No

VETO MESSAGE: No

MESSAGE ON SIGNING: No

FOLLOWING WERE PRINTED:

REPORTS: Yes

HEARINGS: No

Report mentioned in statements:
974.90 | New Jersey. Law Revision Commission.
L446 Annual Report..., ~~May, 1992~~. Trenton, 1992.
1991 [see pp. 5-7 & Appendix F--attached]

DEPOSITORY COPY
Do Not Remove From Library

KBG:pp

P.L.1995, CHAPTER 360, approved January 5, 1996
1994 Assembly No. 1550 (First Reprint)

1 AN ACT concerning the requirement that certain transactions
2 and agreements be in writing, and revising parts of the 3 statutory law.

4
5 BE IT ENACTED by the Senate and General Assembly of the
6 State of New Jersey:

7 1. (New section) <sup>1</sup>Definitions.<sup>1</sup> As used in this act:
8 "Interest in real estate" <sup>1</sup>[includes] means<sup>1</sup> any right, title or 9 estate in real estate, and shall include a lease of real estate, a
10 lien on real estate, a profit, an easement, an interest in a trust in 11 real estate and a share in a cooperative apartment.

12 "Transfer of an interest in real estate" means the sale, gift,
13 creation or extinguishment of an interest in real estate.

14 Source: R.S.25:1-1 through 25:1-4, 25:1-5(d).

15 2. (New section) <sup>1</sup>Writing Requirement, Conveyances of an 16 Interest in Real Estate.<sup>1</sup> a. A transaction intended to transfer 17 an interest in real estate shall not be effective to transfer 18 ownership of the interest unless:

19 (1) a description of the real estate sufficient to identify it, the 20 nature of the interest, the fact of the transfer and the identity of 21 the transferor and the transferee are established in a writing
22 signed by or on behalf of the transferor; or

23 (2) the transferor has placed the transferee in possession of 24 the real estate as a result of the transaction and the transferee
25 has paid all or part of the consideration for the transfer or has 26 reasonably relied on the effectiveness of the transfer to the 27 transferee's detriment.

28 b. A transaction which does not satisfy the requirements of 29 this section shall not be enforceable except as an agreement to 30 transfer an interest in real estate under section 4 of this act.

31 c. This section shall not apply to leases.

32 d. This section shall not apply to the creation of easements by 33 prescription or implication.

34 Source: R.S.25:1-1, 25:1-2.

35 3. (New section) <sup>1</sup>Writing Requirements, Leases.<sup>1</sup> A 36 transaction intended to create a lease of real estate for more 37 than three years shall not be enforceable unless:

38 a. the leased premises, the term of the lease and the identity
39 of the lessor and the lessee are established in a writing signed by 40 or on behalf of the party against whom enforcement is sought; or

41 b. the real estate, the term of the lease and the identity of the 42 lessor and the lessee are proved by clear and convincing evidence.

43 Source: R.S.25:1-1, 25:1-5(d).

EXPLANATION—Matter enclosed in bold-faced brackets [thus] in the above bill is not enacted and is intended to be omitted in the law.

Matter underlined thus is new matter.

Matter enclosed in superscript numerals has been adopted as follows:
<sup>1</sup> Assembly AJL committee amendments adopted November 21, 1994.

1 4. (New section) <sup>1</sup>Enforceability of Agreements regarding 2 Real Estate.<sup>1</sup> An agreement to transfer an interest in real estate
3 or to hold an interest in real estate for the benefit of another 4 shall not be enforceable unless:

5 a. a description of the real estate sufficient to identify it, the
6 nature of the interest to be transferred, the existence of the 7 agreement, and the identity of the transferor and transferee are
8 established in a writing signed by or on behalf of the party
9 against whom enforcement is sought; or

10 b. a description of the real estate sufficient to identify it, the 11 nature of the interest to be transferred, the existence of the 12 agreement and the identity of the transferor and the transferee
13 are proved by clear and convincing evidence.

14 Source: R.S.25:1-3, 25:1-4, 25:1-5(d).

15 5. (New section) <sup>1</sup>Effect on Unwritten Transactions.<sup>1</sup>
16 Transactions involving an interest in real estate, and agreements
17 to transfer an interest in real estate or to hold an interest in real
18 estate for the benefit of another, which are not established in a 19 writing, are not effective against bona fide purchasers for 20 valuable consideration without notice or against lienors without 21 notice.

22 6. (New section) <sup>1</sup>Liability for the Obligation of Another.<sup>1</sup> A
23 promise to be liable for the obligation of another person, in order
24 to be enforceable, shall be in a writing signed by the person
25 assuming the liability or by that person's agent. The 26 consideration for the promise need not be stated in the writing.

27 Source: R.S.25:1-5(a), 25:1-5(b), 25:1-8.

28 7. (New section) <sup>1</sup>Commissions of Real Estate Broker and 29 Business Broker, Writing Required.<sup>1</sup> a. As used in this section:

30 "Business broker" means a person who negotiates the purchase
31 or sale of a business.

32 "Negotiates" includes identifies, provides information
33 concerning, or procures an introduction to prospective parties, or 34 assists in the negotiation or consummation of the transaction.

35 "Purchase or sale of a business" includes the purchase or sale
36 of good will or of the majority of the voting interest in a 37 corporation, and of a major part of inventory or fixtures not in 38 the ordinary course of the transferor's business.

39 "Real estate broker" means a licensed real estate broker or 40 other person performing the services of a real estate agent or 41 broker.

42 "Transfer or sale" means the transfer of an interest in real
43 estate or the purchase or sale of a business.

44 b. Except as provided in subsection d. of this section, a real
45 estate broker who acts as agent or broker on behalf of a principal
46 for the transfer of an interest in real estate, including lease
47 interests for less than three years, is entitled to a commission
48 only if before or after the transfer the authority of the broker is 49 given or recognized in a writing signed by the principal or the 50 principal's authorized agent, and the writing states either the 51 amount or the rate of commission. For the purposes of this 52 subsection, the interest of a mortgagee or lienor is not an 53 interest in real estate.

54 c. Except as provided in subsection d. of this section, a

1 business broker is entitled to a commission only if before or after
2 the sale of the business, the authority of the broker is expressed
3 or recognized in a writing signed by the seller or buyer or 4 authorized agent, and the writing states either the amount or the 5 rate of commission.

6 d. A broker who acts pursuant to an oral agreement is entitled 7 to a commission only if:

8 (1) within five days after making the oral agreement and 9 before the transfer or sale, the broker serves the principal with a
10 written notice which states that its terms are those of the prior 11 oral agreement including the rate or amount of commission to be 12 paid; and

13 (2) before the principal serves the broker with a written
14 rejection of the oral agreement, the broker either effects the 15 transfer or sale, or, in good faith, enters negotiations with a 16 prospective party who later effects the transfer or sale.

17 e. The notices provided for in this section shall be served
18 either personally, or by registered or certified mail, at the last 19 known address of the person to be served.

20 Source: R.S.25:1-9.

21 8. R.S.25:1-5 is amended to read as follows:

22 25:1-5. Promises or agreements not binding unless in writing.
23 No action shall be brought upon any of the following agreements
24 or promises, unless the agreement or promise, upon which such 25 action shall be brought or some memorandum or note thereof,
26 shall be in writing, and signed by the party to be charged
27 therewith, or by some other person thereunto by him lawfully
28 authorized:

29 a. [A special promise of an executor or administrator to 30 answer damages out of his own estate;] (Deleted by amendment,
31 P.L. , c. )

32 b. [A special promise to answer for the debt, default or 33 miscarriage of another person;] (Deleted by amendment, P.L. , 34 c. )

35 c. An agreement made upon consideration of marriage entered
36 into prior to the effective date of the "Uniform Premarital
37 Agreement Act," P.L.1988, c.99 (C.37:2-31 et seq.);

38 d. [A contract for sale of real estate, or any interest in or
39 concerning the same;] (Deleted by amendment, P.L. , c. )

40 e. [An agreement that is not to be performed within one year
41 from the making thereof;] (Deleted by amendment, P.L. , c. )

42 f. A contract, promise, undertaking or commitment to loan
43 money or to grant, extend or renew credit, in an amount greater
44 than $100,000, not primarily for personal, family or household
45 purposes, made by a person engaged in the business of lending or 46 arranging for the lending of money or extending credit. For the 47 purposes of this subsection, a contract, promise, undertaking or 48 commitment to loan money shall include agreements to lease
49 personal property if the lease is primarily a method of financing
50 the obtaining of the property; or

51 g. An agreement by a creditor to forbear from exercising
52 remedies pursuant to a contract, promise, undertaking or 53 commitment which is subject to the provisions of subsection f. of 54 this section.

55 (cf: P.L.1991, c.86, s.1)

A1550 [1R]

4

1    P. R.S.25:1-1 through R.S.25:1-4 and R.S.25:1-8 through
2    R.S.25:1-9 are repealed.

3    10. This act shall take effect immediately.

4

5

6

7

8    Revises the requirement that certain transactions and 9    agreements be in writing.

(1994)

- 1 paid; and
- 2 (2) before the principal serves the broker with a written
- 3 rejection of the oral agreement, the broker either effects the
- 4 transfer or sale, or, in good faith, enters negotiations with a
- 5 prospective party who later effects the transfer or sale.
- 6 e. The notices provided for in this section shall be served
- 7 either personally, or by registered or certified mail, at the last
- 8 known address of the person to be served.
- 9 8. R.S.25:1-5 is amended to read as follows:
- 10 25:1-5. Promises or agreements not binding unless in writing.
- 11 No action shall be brought upon any of the following agreements
- 12 or promises, unless the agreement or promise, upon which such
- 13 action shall be brought or some memorandum or note thereof,
- 14 shall be in writing, and signed by the party to be charged
- 15 therewith, or by some other person thereunto by him lawfully
- 16 authorized:
- 17 a. [A special promise of an executor or administrator to
- 18 answer damages out of his own estate;] (~~Deleted by amendment,~~
- 19 ~~P.L. . . . c. . . .~~)
- 20 b. [A special promise to answer for the debt, default or
- 21 miscarriage of another person;] (~~Deleted by amendment, P.L. . . .~~
- 22 ~~c. . . .~~)
- 23 c. An agreement made upon consideration of marriage ~~entered~~
- 24 into prior to the effective date of the "Uniform Premarital
- 25 Agreement Act," P.L.1988, c.99 (C.37:2-31 et seq.);
- 26 d. [A contract for sale of real estate, or any interest in or
- 27 concerning the same;] (~~Deleted by amendment, P.L. . . . c. . . .~~)
- 28 e. [An agreement that is not to be performed within one year
- 29 from the making thereof;] (~~Deleted by amendment, P.L. . . . c. . . .~~)
- 30 f. A contract, promise, undertaking or commitment to loan
- 31 money or to grant, extend or renew credit, in an amount greater
- 32 than $100,000, not primarily for personal, family or household
- 33 purposes, made by a person engaged in the business of lending or
- 34 arranging for the lending of money or extending credit. For the
- 35 purposes of this subsection, a contract, promise, undertaking or
- 36 commitment to loan money shall include agreements to lease
- 37 personal property if the lease is primarily a method of financing
- 38 the obtaining of the property: or
- 39 g. An agreement by a creditor to forbear from exercising
- 40 remedies pursuant to a contract, promise, undertaking or
- 41 commitment which is subject to the provisions of subsection f. of
- 42 this section.
- 43 (cf: P.L.1991, c.86, s.1)
- 44 9. R.S.25:1-1 through R.S.25:1-4 and R.S.25:1-6 through
- 45 R.S.25:1-9 are repealed.
- 46 10. This act shall take effect immediately.
- 47
- 48

STATEMENT

49

50

51 This bill revises and repeals parts of the law, commonly known

52 as the New Jersey statute of frauds, which requires that certain

53 transactions and agreements be in writing to be valid or

54 enforceable. The bill provides that, subject to certain limited

1 exceptions, the following transfers, transactions and agreements
2 must be in writing in order to be enforceable: transfers of an
3 interest in real estate; transactions to create a lease of real
4 estate for more than three years; agreements to transfer an
5 interest in real estate or to hold an interest in real estate for the 6 benefit of another; promises to be liable for the obligation of
7 another person; agreements to pay a commission to a real estate
8 broker for acting as an agent or broker in the conveyance of an
9 interest in real estate; and agreements to pay a commission to a
10 business broker for negotiating the purchase or sale of a
11 business. The bill provides, however, that these transfers,
12 transactions, and agreements may be enforced without a writing
13 under certain limited circumstances set forth in the bill.

14 The bill also provides that transactions involving an interest in 15 real estate, and agreements for the transfer of an interest in real 16 estate or to hold an interest in real estate for the benefit of 17 another, which are not established in a writing, are not
18 enforceable against bona fide purchasers for valuable
19 consideration without notice or against lienors without notice.

20 The bill deletes the requirement in the current statute of 21 frauds that special promises of executors or administrators to 22 answer damages out of their own estates and agreements that are 23 not to be performed in one year are not enforceable unless they 24 are in writing.

25 This bill is a recommendation of the Law Revision Commission.

26

27

28

29

30 Revises the requirement that certain transactions and
31 agreements be in writing.

ASSEMBLY JUDICIARY, LAW AND PUBLIC SAFETY COMMITTEE

STATEMENT TO

ASSEMBLY, No. 1550

with committee amendments

STATE OF NEW JERSEY

DATED: NOVEMBER 21, 1994

The Assembly Judiciary, Law and Public Safety Committee reports favorably and with committee amendments Assembly Bill No. 1550.

This bill revises and repeals parts of the law, commonly known as the New Jersey statute of frauds, which requires that certain transactions and agreements be in writing to be valid or enforceable. The bill provides that, subject to certain limited exceptions, the following transfers, transactions and agreements must be in writing in order to be enforceable: transfers of an interest in real estate; transactions to create a lease of real estate for more than three years; agreements to transfer an interest in real estate or to hold an interest in real estate for the benefit of another; promises to be liable for the obligation of another person; agreements to pay a commission to a real estate broker for acting as an agent or broker in the conveyance of an interest in real estate; and agreements to pay a commission to a business broker for negotiating the purchase or sale of a business. The bill provides, however, that these transfers, transactions, and agreements may be enforced without a writing under certain limited circumstances set forth in the bill.

The bill also provides that transactions involving an interest in real estate, and agreements for the transfer of an interest in real estate or to hold an interest in real estate for the benefit of another, which are not established in a writing, are not enforceable against bona fide purchasers for valuable consideration without notice or against lienors without notice.

The bill deletes the requirement in the current statute of frauds that special promises of executors or administrators to answer damages out of their own estates and agreements that are not to be performed in one year are not enforceable unless they are in writing.

This bill is a recommendation of the Law Revision Commission. The committee amended the bill to make it identical to the Senate version. The amendments are technical in nature.

As amended, this bill is identical to Senate Bill No. 1034 [1R].

SENATE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE

STATEMENT TO

[FIRST REPRINT]

ASSEMBLY, No. 1550

STATE OF NEW JERSEY

DATED: FEBRUARY 6, 1995

The Senate Judiciary Committee reports favorably Assembly Bill No. 1550 (1R).

This bill, which is based on a recommendation of the Law Revision Commission, revises and repeals parts of the statutory law, commonly known as the statute of frauds, which requires certain transaction and agreements to be in writing to be valid or enforceable.

SENATE, No. 1034

STATE OF NEW JERSEY

INTRODUCED MAY 12, 1994

By Senator MARTIN

1 AN ACT concerning the requirement that certain transactions
2 and agreements be in writing, and revising parts of the 3 statutory law.

4
5 BE IT ENACTED by the Senate and General Assembly of the
6 State of New Jersey:

7 1. (New section) Definitions. As used in this act:

8 "Interest in real estate" includes any right, title or estate in 9 real estate, and shall include a lease of real estate, a lien on real
10 estate, a profit, an easement, an interest in a trust in real estate 11 and a share in a cooperative apartment.

12 "Transfer of an interest in real estate" means the sale, gift,
13 creation or extinguishment of an interest in real estate.

14 Source: R.S.25:1-1 through 25:1-4; 25:1-5(d).

15 2. (New section) Wrong Requirement, Conveyances of an 16 Interest in Real Estate. a. A transaction intended to transfer an 17 interest in real estate shall not be effective to transfer ownership 18 of the interest unless:

19 (1) a description of the real estate sufficient to identify it, the 20 nature of the interest, the fact of the transfer and the identity of 21 the transferor and the transferee are established in a writing
22 signed by or on behalf of the transferor; or

23 (2) the transferor has placed the transferee in possession of 24 the real estate as a result of the transaction and the transferee
25 has paid all or part of the consideration for the transfer or has 26 reasonably relied on the effectiveness of the transfer to the 27 transferee's detriment.

28 b. A transaction which does not satisfy the requirements of 29 this section shall not be enforceable except as an agreement to 30 transfer an interest in real estate under section 4 of this act.

31 c. This section shall not apply to leases.

32 d. This section shall not apply to the creation of easements by 33 prescription or implication.

34 Source: R.S.25:1-1, 25:1-2.

35 3. (New section) Writing Requirement, Leases. A transaction
36 intended to create a lease of real estate for more than three 37 years shall not be enforceable unless:

38 a. the leased premises, the term of the lease and the identity
39 of the lessor and the lessee are established in a writing signed by 40 or on behalf of the party against whom enforcement is sought; or

41 b. the real estate, the term of the lease and the identity of the 42 lessor and the lessee are proved by clear and convincing evidence.

43 Source: R.S.25:1-1, 25:1-5(d).

EXPLANATION--Matter enclosed in bold-faced brackets [thus] in the above bill is not enacted and is intended to be omitted in the law.

Matter underlined thus is new matter.

1 4. (New section) Enforceability of Agreements regarding Real
2 Estate. An agreement to transfer an interest in real estate or to
3 hold an interest in real estate for the benefit of another shall not
4 be enforceable unless:

5 a. a description of the real estate sufficient to identify it, the
6 nature of the interest to be transferred, the existence of the 7 agreement, and the identity of the transferor and transferee are
8 established in a writing signed by or on behalf of the party
9 against whom enforcement is sought; or

10 b. a description of the real estate sufficient to identify it, the 11 nature of the interest to be transferred, the existence of the 12 agreement and the identity of the transferor and the transferee
13 are proved by clear and convincing evidence.

14 Source: R.S.25:1-3, 25:1-4, 25:1-5(d).

15 5. (New section) Effect of Unwritten Transactions.
16 Transactions involving an interest in real estate, and agreements
17 to transfer an interest in real estate or to hold an interest in real
18 estate for the benefit of another, which are not established in a
19 writing, are not effective against bona fide purchasers for 20 valuable consideration without notice or against lienors without 21 notice.

22 6. (New section) Liability for the Obligation of Another. A
23 promise to be liable for the obligation of another person, in order
24 to be enforceable, shall be in a writing signed by the person
25 assuming the liability or by that person's agent. The
26 consideration for the promise need not be stated in the writing.

27 Source: R.S.25:1-5(a), 25:1-5(b), 25:1-8.

28 7. (New section) Commissions of Real Estate Broker and 29 Business Broker, Writing Required. a. As used in this section:

30 "Business broker" means a person who negotiates the purchase
31 or sale of a business.

32 "Negotiates" includes identifies, provides information
33 concerning, or procures an introduction to prospective parties, or 34 assists in the negotiation or consummation of the transaction.

35 "Purchase or sale of a business" includes the purchase or sale
36 of good will or of the majority of the voting interest in a
37 corporation, and of a major part of inventory or fixtures not in 38 the ordinary course of the transferor's business.

39 "Real estate broker" means a licensed real estate broker or 40 other person performing the services of a real estate agent or 41 broker.

42 "Transfer or sale" means the transfer of an interest in real
43 estate or the purchase or sale of a business.

44 b. Except as provided in subsection d. of this section, a real
45 estate broker who acts as agent or broker on behalf of a principal
46 for the transfer of an interest in real estate, including lease
47 interests for less than three years, is entitled to a commission
48 only if before or after the transfer the authority of the broker is 49 given or recognized in a writing signed by the principal or the 50 principal's authorized agent, and the writing states either the 51 amount or the rate of commission. For the purposes of this 52 subsection, the interest of a mortgagee or lienor is not an 53 interest in real estate.

54 c. Except as provided in subsection d. of this section, a

1 business broker is entitled to a commission only if before or after
2 the sale of the business, the authority of the broker is expressed
3 or recognized in a writing signed by the seller or buyer or 4 authorized agent, and the writing states either the amount or the
5 rate of commission.

6 d. A broker who acts pursuant to an oral agreement is entitled
7 to a commission only if:

8 (1) within five days after making the oral agreement and
9 before the transfer or sale, the broker serves the principal with a
10 written notice which states that its terms are those of the prior 11 oral agreement including the rate or amount of commission to be 12 paid; and

13 (2) before the principal serves the broker with a written
14 rejection of the oral agreement, the broker either effects the 15 transfer or sale, or, in good faith, enters negotiations with a
16 prospective party who later effects the transfer or sale.

17 e. The notices provided for in this section shall be served
18 either personally, or by registered or certified mail, at the last 19 known address of the person to be served.

20 Source: R.S.25:1-9.

21 8. R.S.25:1-5 is amended to read as follows:

22 25:1-5. Promises or agreements not binding unless in writing.
23 No action shall be brought upon any of the following agreements
24 or promises, unless the agreement or promise, upon which such
25 action shall be brought or some memorandum or note thereof,
26 shall be in writing, and signed by the party to be charged
27 therewith, or by some other person thereunto by him lawfully
28 authorized:

29 a. [A special promise of an executor or administrator to 30 answer damages out of his own estate;] (Deleted by amendment,
31 P.L. , c. ) (now pending before the legislature as this bill)

32 b. [A special promise to answer for the debt, default or
33 miscarriage of another person;] (Deleted by amendment, P.L. , 34 c. ) (now pending before the legislature as this bill)

35 c. An agreement made upon consideration of marriage entered
36 into prior to the effective date of the "Uniform Premarital
37 Agreement Act," P.L.1988, c.99 (C.37:2-31 et seq.);

38 d. [A contract for sale of real estate, or any interest in or
39 concerning the same;] (Deleted by amendment, P.L. , c. )
40 (now pending before the legislature as this bill)

41 e. [An agreement that is not to be performed within one year
42 from the making thereof;] (Deleted by amendment, P.L. , c. )
43 (now pending before the legislature as this bill)

44 f. A contract, promise, undertaking or commitment to loan
45 money or to grant, extend or renew credit, in an amount greater
46 than $100,000, not primarily for personal, family or household
47 purposes, made by a person engaged in the business of lending or 48 arranging for the lending of money or extending credit. For the 49 purposes of this subsection, a contract, promise, undertaking or
50 commitment to loan money shall include agreements to lease
51 personal property if the lease is primarily a method of financing
52 the obtaining of the property; or

53 g. An agreement by a creditor to forbear from exercising
54 remedies pursuant to a contract, promise, undertaking or

1 commitment which is subject to the provisions of subsection f. of
2 this section.

3 (cf: P.L.1991, c.86, s.1)

4 9. R.S.25:1-1 through R.S.25:1-4 and R.S.25:1-6 through
5 R.S.25:1-9 are repealed.

6 10. This act shall take effect immediately.

7

8

9

STATEMENT

10

11 This bill revises and repeals parts of the law, commonly known
12 as the New Jersey statute of frauds, which requires that certain 13 transactions and agreements be in writing to be valid or 14 enforceable. The bill provides that, subject to certain limited
15 exceptions, the following transfers, transactions and agreements
16 must be in writing in order to be enforceable: transfers of an
17 interest in real estate; transactions to create a lease of real
18 estate for more than three years; agreements to transfer an 19 interest in real estate or to hold an interest in real estate for the 20 benefit of another; promises to be liable for the obligation of 21 another person; agreements to pay a commission to a real estate
22 broker for acting as an agent or broker in the conveyance of an
23 interest in real estate; and agreements to pay a commission to a
24 business broker for negotiating the purchase or sale of a
25 business. The bill provides, however, that these transfers,
26 transactions, and agreements may be enforced without a writing
27 under certain limited circumstances set forth in the bill.

28

29 The bill also provides that transactions involving an interest in 30 real estate, and agreements for the transfer of an interest in real 31 estate or to hold an interest in real estate for the benefit of 32 another, which are not established in a writing, are not
33 enforceable against bona fide purchasers for valuable
34 consideration without notice or against lienors without notice.

34

35 The bill deletes the requirement in the current statute of 36 frauds that special promises of executors or administrators to 37 answer damages out of their own estates and agreements that are 38 not to be performed in one year are not enforceable unless they 39 are in writing.

39

40 This bill is a recommendation of the Law Revision Commission.

40

41

42

43

44

45

---

Revises the requirement that certain transactions and agreements be in writing.

SENATE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE

STATEMENT TO

SENATE, No. 1034

STATE OF NEW JERSEY

DATED: OCTOBER 13, 1994

The Senate Judiciary Committee reports favorably and with committee amendments Senate, No. 1034.

This bill revises and repeals parts of the law, commonly known as the New Jersey statute of frauds, which requires that certain transactions and agreements be in writing to be valid or enforceable. The provisions of the bill are based on a recommendation of the Law Revision Commission.

The bill provides that, subject to certain limited exceptions, the following transfers, transactions and agreements must be in writing in order to be enforceable: transfers of an interest in real estate; transactions to create a lease of real estate for more than three years; agreements to transfer an interest in real estate or to hold an interest in real estate for the benefit of another; promises to be liable for the obligation of another person; agreements to pay a commission to a real estate broker for acting as an agent or broker in the conveyance of an interest in real estate; and agreements to pay a commission to a business broker for negotiating the purchase or sale of a business.

This bill also provides that transactions involving an interest in real estate and agreements for the transfer of an interest in real estate or to hold an interest in real estate for the benefit of another, which are not established in a writing, are not enforceable against bona fide purchasers for valuable consideration without notice or against lienors without notice.

The bill deletes the requirement in the current statute of frauds that special promises of executors or administrators to answer damages out of their own estates and agreements that are not to be performed in one year are not enforceable unless they are in writing.

The amendments adopted by the committee were of a technical nature clarifying the definition "interest in real estate" in section 1 and correcting a drafting error in section 2.

0077
0193

SENATE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE

AMENDMENTS

to

SENATE, 1034

(Sponsored by Senator Martin)

ADOPTED

OCT 13 1994

NO Italics

REPLACE SECTION 1 TO READ:

1. (New section) Definitions. As used in this act:

"Interest in real estate" <sup>1</sup>[includes] means<sup>1</sup> any right, title or estate in real estate, and shall include a lease of real estate, a lien on real estate, a profit, an easement, an interest in a trust in real estate and a share in a cooperative apartment.

"Transfer of an interest in real estate" means the sale, gift, creation or extinguishment of an interest in real estate.

Source: R.S.25:1-1 through 25:1-4; 25:1-5(d).

REPLACE SECTION 2 TO READ:

2. (New section) <sup>1</sup>[Wrong] Writing<sup>1</sup> Requirement, Conveyances of an Interest in Real Estate. a. A transaction intended to transfer an interest in real estate shall not be effective to transfer ownership of the interest unless:

(1) a description of the real estate sufficient to identify it, the nature of the interest, the fact of the transfer and the identity of the transferor and the transferee are established in a writing signed by or on behalf of the transferor; or

(2) the transferor has placed the transferee in possession of the real estate as a result of the transaction and the transferee has paid all or part of the consideration for the transfer or has reasonably relied on the effectiveness of the transfer to the transferee's detriment.

b. A transaction which does not satisfy the requirements of this section shall not be enforceable except as an agreement to transfer an interest in real estate under section 4 of this act.

c. This section shall not apply to leases.

d. This section shall not apply to the creation of easements by prescription or implication.

Source: R.S.25:1-1, 25:1-2.

[FIRST REPRINT]
SENATE, No. 1034

STATE OF NEW JERSEY

INTRODUCED MAY 12, 1994

By Senator MARTIN

1 AN ACT concerning the requirement that certain transactions
2 and agreements be in writing, and revising parts of the 3 statutory law.

4
5 BE IT ENACTED by the Senate and General Assembly of the
6 State of New Jersey:

7 1. (New section) Definitions. As used in this act:

8 "Interest in real estate" <sup>1</sup>[includes] means<sup>1</sup> any right, title or 9 estate in real estate, and shall include a lease of real estate, a 10 lien on real estate, a profit, an easement, an interest in a trust in 11 real estate and a share in a cooperative apartment.

12 "Transfer of an interest in real estate" means the sale, gift,
13 creation or extinguishment of an interest in real estate.

14 Source: R.S.25:1-1 through 25:1-4; 25:1-5(d).

15 2. (New section) <sup>1</sup>[Wrong] Writing<sup>1</sup> Requirement.
16 Conveyances of an Interest in Real Estate. a. A transaction 17 intended to transfer an interest in real estate shall not be 18 effective to transfer ownership of the interest unless:

19 (1) a description of the real estate sufficient to identify it, the 20 nature of the interest, the fact of the transfer and the identity of 21 the transferor and the transferee are established in a writing
22 signed by or on behalf of the transferor; or

23 (2) the transferor has placed the transferee in possession of 24 the real estate as a result of the transaction and the transferee
25 has paid all or part of the consideration for the transfer or has 26 reasonably relied on the effectiveness of the transfer to the 27 transferee's detriment.

28 b. A transaction which does not satisfy the requirements of 29 this section shall not be enforceable except as an agreement to 30 transfer an interest in real estate under section 4 of this act.

31 c. This section shall not apply to leases.

32 d. This section shall not apply to the creation of easements by 33 prescription or implication.

34 Source: R.S.25:1-1, 25:1-2.

35 3. (New section) Writing Requirement, Leases. A transaction
36 intended to create a lease of real estate for more than three 37 years shall not be enforceable unless:

38 a. the leased premises, the term of the lease and the identity
39 of the lessor and the lessee are established in a writing signed by 40 or on behalf of the party against whom enforcement is sought; or

EXPLANATION--Matter enclosed in bold-faced brackets [thus] in the above bill is not enacted and is intended to be omitted in the law.

Matter underlined thus is new matter.

Matter enclosed in superscript numerals has been adopted as follows:
<sup>1</sup> Senate SJU committee amendments adopted October 13, 1994.

1 b. the real estate, the term of the lease and the identity of the
2 lessor and the lessee are proved by clear and convincing evidence.

3 Source: R.S.25:1-1, 25:1-5(d).

4 4. (New section) Enforceability of Agreements regarding Real
5 Estate. An agreement to transfer an interest in real estate or to 6 hold an interest in real estate for the benefit of another shall not
7 be enforceable unless:

8 a. a description of the real estate sufficient to identify it, the
9 nature of the interest to be transferred, the existence of the 10 agreement, and the identity of the transferor and transferee are 11 established in a writing signed by or on behalf of the party
12 against whom enforcement is sought; or

13 b. a description of the real estate sufficient to identify it, the 14 nature of the interest to be transferred, the existence of the 15 agreement and the identity of the transferor and the transferee
16 are proved by clear and convincing evidence.

17 Source: R.S.25:1-3, 25:1-4, 25:1-5(d).

18 5. (New section) Effect of Unwritten Transactions.
19 Transactions involving an interest in real estate, and agreements
20 to transfer an interest in real estate or to hold an interest in real
21 estate for the benefit of another, which are not established in a
22 writing, are not effective against bona fide purchasers for 23 valuable consideration without notice or against lienors without 24 notice.

25 6. (New section) Liability for the Obligation of Another. A
26 promise to be liable for the obligation of another person, in order
27 to be enforceable, shall be in a writing signed by the person
28 assuming the liability or by that person's agent. The 29 consideration for the promise need not be stated in the writing.

30 Source: R.S.25:1-5(a), 25:1-5(b), 25:1-8.

31 7. (New section) Commissions of Real Estate Broker and 32 Business Broker, Writing Required. a. As used in this section:

33 "Business broker" means a person who negotiates the purchase
34 or sale of a business.

35 "Negotiates" includes identifies, provides information
36 concerning, or procures an introduction to prospective parties, or 37 assists in the negotiation or consummation of the transaction.

38 "Purchase or sale of a business" includes the purchase or sale
39 of good will or of the majority of the voting interest in a
40 corporation, and of a major part of inventory or fixtures not in 41 the ordinary course of the transferor's business.

42 "Real estate broker" means a licensed real estate broker or 43 other person performing the services of a real estate agent or 44 broker.

45 "Transfer or sale" means the transfer of an interest in real
46 estate or the purchase or sale of a business.

47 b. Except as provided in subsection d. of this section, a real
48 estate broker who acts as agent or broker on behalf of a principal
49 for the transfer of an interest in real estate, including lease
50 interests for less than three years, is entitled to a commission
51 only if before or after the transfer the authority of the broker is 52 given or recognized in a writing signed by the principal or the 53 principal's authorized agent, and the writing states either the 54 amount or the rate of commission. For the purposes of this

1 subsection, the interest of a mortgagee or lienor is not an
2 interest in real estate.

3 c. Except as provided in subsection d. of this section, a
4 business broker is entitled to a commission only if before or after 5 the sale of the business, the authority of the broker is expressed
6 or recognized in a writing signed by the seller or buyer or 7 authorized agent, and the writing states either the amount or the 8 rate of commission.

9 d. A broker who acts pursuant to an oral agreement is entitled
10 to a commission only if:

11 (1) within five days after making the oral agreement and
12 before the transfer or sale, the broker serves the principal with a
13 written notice which states that its terms are those of the prior 14 oral agreement including the rate or amount of commission to be 15 paid; and

16 (2) before the principal serves the broker with a written
17 rejection of the oral agreement, the broker either effects the 18 transfer or sale, or, in good faith, enters negotiations with a
19 prospective party who later effects the transfer or sale.

20 e. The notices provided for in this section shall be served
21 either personally, or by registered or certified mail, at the last
22 known address of the person to be served.

23 Source: R.S.25:1-9.

24 B. R.S.25:1-5 is amended to read as follows:

25 25:1-5. Promises or agreements not binding unless in writing.
26 No action shall be brought upon any of the following agreements
27 or promises, unless the agreement or promise, upon which such 28 action shall be brought or some memorandum or note thereof,
29 shall be in writing, and signed by the party to be charged
30 therewith, or by some other person thereunto by him lawfully
31 authorized:

32 a. [A special promise of an executor or administrator to 33 answer damages out of his own estate:] (Deleted by amendment,
34 P.L. , c. ) (now pending before the legislature as this bill)

35 b. [A special promise to answer for the debt, default or
36 miscarriage of another person:] (Deleted by amendment, P.L. , 37 c. ) (now pending before the legislature as this bill)

38 c. An agreement made upon consideration of marriage entered
39 into prior to the effective date of the "Uniform Premarital
40 Agreement Act," P.L.1988, c.99 (C.37:2-31 et seq.);

41 d. [A contract for sale of real estate, or any interest in or
42 concerning the same:] (Deleted by amendment, P.L. , c. )
43 (now pending before the legislature as this bill)

44 e. [An agreement that is not to be performed within one year
45 from the making thereof:] (Deleted by amendment, P.L. , c. )
46 (now pending before the legislature as this bill)

47 f. A contract, promise, undertaking or commitment to loan
48 money or to grant, extend or renew credit, in an amount greater
49 than $100,000, not primarily for personal, family or household
50 purposes, made by a person engaged in the business of lending or 51 arranging for the lending of money or extending credit. For the 52 purposes of this subsection, a contract, promise, undertaking or 53 commitment to loan money shall include agreements to lease
54 personal property if the lease is primarily a method of

1 financing the obtaining of the property; or
2 g. An agreement by a creditor to forbear from exercising
3 remedies pursuant to a contract, promise, undertaking or
4 commitment which is subject to the provisions of subsection f. of
5 this section.

6 (cf: P.L.1991, c.86, s.1)

7 9. R.S.25:1-1 through R.S.25:1-4 and R.S.25:1-6 through
8 R.S.25:1-9 are repealed.

9 10. This act shall take effect immediately.

10

11

12

13

14 Revises the requirement that certain transactions and 15 agreements be in writing.

974.901
2446

NEW JERSEY LAW REVISION COMM.
ANNUAL REPORT, 1991.

proposal would eliminate this unnecessary duplication, saving the courts more than $100,000 per year.

D. Tax Court

The Commission filed a Report and Recommendations on the Tax Court. (See Appendix D.) The Tax Court was established in 1978 by a statute which transferred the functions of the court's predecessor, the Division of Tax Appeals, to the new court. The Commission proposal clarifies the jurisdiction and powers of the Tax Court and eliminates unnecessary provisions.

E. Terms of Appointment

The Commission filed a Report and Recommendations on Terms of Appointment. (See Appendix E.) The proposed statute codifies and clarifies the rules governing the commencement and expiration dates of terms of office for members of public bodies. The proposed statute also establishes rules concerning holdover, successor, replacement and ex officio memberships.

→ F. Statute of Frauds

The Commission filed a Report and Recommendations Relating to Writing Requirements for Real Estate Transactions, Brokerage Agreements and Suretyship Agreements. (See Appendix F.) This title is more accurate than the existing "Statute of Frauds." Few New Jersey statutes are of more ancient derivation than the New Jersey Statute of Frauds, R.S. 25:1-1 to -9, which was enacted in 1794 and drawn almost verbatim from the English statute of 1677.

The original five sections of the Statute of Frauds require most transactions concerning land to be in writing, and enumerate the types of agreements which must be in writing to be enforceable. The remaining four sections were added in the nineteenth century. R.S. 25:1-6 and -7 broadened the substantive scope of the statute by requiring agreements to pay certain debts to be in writing and R.S. 25:1-8 added a rule of construction applicable to the first seven sections. R.S. 25:1-9 governs in detail the writing required for a real estate broker to be entitled to a commission. The statute essentially creates mandatory requirements for proof of certain transactions. Numerous decisions apply the statute's provisions in ways that are not consistent with their words. The archaic terminology of the statute's sections, coupled with the large number of reported cases, which have created exceptions and specialized interpretations, often make the statute difficult to understand and apply.

In 1990, the Commission prepared a revised statute based on a staff report delineating the history and interpretation of the Statute of Frauds. The Commission proposal modernized the language of existing law, eliminated archaic and unnecessary provisions and codified settled judicial interpretation of the Statute of Frauds. Where court decisions have been inconsistent, the Commission has proposed clear rules to eliminate ambiguity.

In May 1990, the Commission's Tentative Report on Formal Requirements for Real Estate Transactions, Brokerage Agreements and Suretyship Agreements was distributed to the public for comment, and numerous responses were received and considered. Extensive changes were made to the Tentative Report and in January 1991 the Second Tentative Report on Writing Requirements for Real Estate Transactions, Brokerage Agreements and Suretyship Agreements was distributed for further public comment. The Tentative Reports were appended to the 1990 Annual Report.

In the Final Report, the Commission recommends elimination of the writing requirement in certain transactions, modification of provisions concerning leases, trusts and contracts for the sale of real estate, and substantial retention of the preclusive writing requirement for conveyances of land and surety contracts. The clarification and simplification of the law by the use of modern language should make it easier for lawyers and those to whom these laws apply understand what is required and should result in the reduction of litigation concerning writing requirements.

IV. PROJECTS AWAITING FINAL RECOMMENDATION

A. Material Witness Statutes

The Commission's Tentative Report relating to Material Witnesses was distributed for public comment in 1991. (See Appendix G.) The Report resulted from the Commission's decision in 1990 to review and revise the existing material witness statutes which have been held to involve possible constitutional problems. (See State v. Misik, 238 N.J. Super. 367 (Law Div. 1989); N.J.S. 2A:162-2 to 2A: 162-4.) A material witness is not accused of a crime. However, his or her appearance may be essential in a criminal case.

The Report contains a proposal to regulate judicial orders directing the appearance or detention of a material witness. A material witness, like any other person, has the right to be free from arbitrary seizure; law enforcement officials need adequate procedures to detain witnesses needed to prosecute crime. The proposed draft statute seeks to establish reasonable procedures which balance the rights of the individual and the needs of the State in law enforcement.

974.901
L446
991

REPORT AND RECOMMENDATIONS
RELATING TO WRITING REQUIREMENTS FOR REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS BROKERAGE AGREEMENTS
AND SURETYSHIP AGREEMENTS

NEW JERSEY LAW REVISION COMMISSION
15 Washington Street
Newark, New Jersey 07102
(201)648-4575
December, 1991

INTRODUCTION

The New Jersey Statute of Frauds, R.S. 25:1-1 to -9, like similar enactments in every state, derives from the Statute for the Prevention of Frauds and Perjuries passed by Parliament in 1677, 29 Charles II, c.3. The English Statute, totalling 24 individual sections, included provisions that required transfers of land to be in writing, discouraged transfers of land in defraud of judgment creditors, and imposed formalities on oral wills of personal property. The Statute also contained provisions which required certain types of agreements to be in writing in order to be enforceable.

The first five sections of the current New Jersey Statute, R.S. 25:1-1 to -5, derive directly from the English Statute. These five sections are those which require most transactions in land or interests in land to be in writing, and provide that certain enumerated types of agreements must be in writing in order to be enforceable. The language of these sections, taken verbatim from the English Statute in 1794, has been retained virtually intact through several complete revisions of the New Jersey statutes. The remaining four sections of the New Jersey Statute of Frauds were added in the nineteenth century. R.S. 25:1-6 and -7 broadened the substantive scope of the Statute by requiring agreements to pay certain debts to be in writing and R.S. 25:1-8 added a rule of construction applicable to the first seven sections. R.S. 25:1-9 governs in detail the writing required for a real estate broker to be entitled to a commission.

The New Jersey Statute of Frauds is in need of in-depth revision. While the Statute has been revised several times as part of comprehensive recompilation projects in the past, the archaic language and expression of the English original has largely survived, making the first five sections opaque and confusing to read. The Statute has been interpreted in a large body of case law that has so changed the meaning of the Statute as to render the literal language of some sections deceptive. In addition, a good deal of this interpretive case law is conflicting and inconsistent.

In the almost 200 years since the adoption of the Statute of Frauds in this State, as well as in other jurisdictions, both the wisdom and efficacy of some of the provisions of the Statute have been debated extensively. During this same time period, however, the Legislature has seen fit not only to add provisions to the original Statute, but also, particularly in recent years, to add similar provisions in other areas of the statutes.<sup>1</sup> It is appropriate under the circumstances to examine the policy reasons underlying the original provisions and to determine whether, and to what extent, these policy reasons remain valid today.

---

<sup>1</sup> See, e.g., C. 17:16C-21 through -28 (Retail Installment Sales Act requirement that every retail installment contract must be in writing and signed by both buyer and seller); C. 56:8-42 (Health Club Services Act requirement that every health club services contract must be in writing); N.J.S. 12A:8-319 (writing requirement for a contract for the sale of securities) and N.J.S. 12A:1-201 (the Uniform Commercial Code derivative of a section of the original Statute of Frauds). See also R.R. 1:21-7 (writing requirement for attorney contingent fee arrangement).

In entitling this project, the Commission has deliberately avoided the use of the term "Statute of Frauds," by way of underlining the fact that limiting opportunities for fraud is only one policy that may be served by imposing a writing requirement. The Commission identified two additional policy reasons that could support the imposition of a writing requirement in certain types of transactions: Protection of consumers, and protection of the interests of third parties in land transactions. In addition, the Commission considered intensively whether the approach of the existing statute - a preclusive writing requirement - was the best method of achieving the policy goals that were identified, or whether the identified policy goals would be better served by imposing a higher standard of proof on transactions not reduced to writing.

The Commission's approach to each type of transaction covered by the existing statute was to identify the policy considerations that would support the imposition of a writing requirement, and then to determine the nature of the writing requirement, if any, that ought to be imposed. The Commission concluded that in some instances a preclusive rule requiring a writing was unnecessary, and to some extent subversive of the Statute's purpose of combatting fraud. Given the sophistication of modern rules concerning discovery and proof, it is the Commission's view that the imposition of a high standard of proof rather than a preclusive rule would unfetter the courts and allow them to best achieve substantial justice in disputes over the validity of parcel transactions.

As a result of this method of study the Commission's recommendations range from complete elimination of the writing requirement in certain transactions, modification of provisions concerning leases of real estate, trusts in real estate, and contracts for the sale of real estate, and substantial retention of the preclusive writing requirement in the case of conveyances of land and surety contracts.

The Land Provisions of the Statute of Frauds

Nowhere are the English origins of the American legal system more apparent than in the law of real property. Both our statutes and judicial decisions on the subject are founded in concepts that were established in England over the five centuries prior to 1776. In particular the codified law of this state still incorporates centuries-old English statutes that establish fundamental property law principles. See, e.g., R.S. 46:3-5 (the Statute Quia Emptores Terrarum) and R.S. 46:3-9 (the Statute of Uses). Another such statute is the New Jersey Statute of Frauds, the first five sections of which, R.S. 25:1-1 to 1-5, are derived from the English Statute of Frauds of 1677. Although frequently regarded merely as a rule of contract law, the New Jersey version of the Statute contains a number of provisions that are concerned with transactions in land. Sections 1 and 2 of the New Jersey statute declare most transactions in land to be void unless they are in writing; sections 3 and 4 require most transactions involving trusts in land to be proved by a writing, and section 5(d) requires contracts for the sale of land to be in writing in order to be enforceable.

Because the writing requirement for land transactions is so fundamental to our present-day conveyancing system, it can be difficult to imagine a time when it was otherwise. In England prior to the Statute of Frauds, however, the transfer of land by ceremony rather than by a writing was still valid. This method of conveyance, livery of seizin, derived from feudal concepts of land holding. While this method was workable when most of the population was illiterate and ownership of land was a matter of common knowledge in the community, in the seventeenth century this type of conveyance had largely been superseded by more modern, written forms of conveyancing and the old forms increasingly were used when a secret conveyance was wanted for illicit purposes. The lawmakers of the day came to recognize that ceremonial conveyances of land facilitated tax evasion and fraudulent transfers of land, and made litigation over title to land more difficult to resolve. The Statute of Frauds changed conveyancing practice in England by expressly eliminating conveyances of land by livery of seizin and by requiring conveyances of land to be in writing. The Statute provided that conveyances of land which were not in writing were "void," and provided that trusts in land were required to be proved by a writing. Requiring conveyances in land to be in writing lessened the opportunity for fraudulent conveyances, tax evasion and disputes over title, and made it possible for grantees to make use of the limited title recordation system which was available at the time. Publicity of land transfers, effectuated by a writing requirement, served a government interest (collection of taxes), a broad public interest (greater security of title generally), and the interests of parties to land transactions (greater reliability in individual transactions).

The Statute of Frauds treatment of executory contracts for the sale of land, as opposed to actual conveyances of land, was less absolute. The Statute of Frauds provided that contracts for the sale of land which were not in writing were merely unenforceable rather than void. Parties were left free to make oral contracts for the sale of land, and to honor their terms, but if one of the parties to an oral contract refused to perform, the oral contract was not enforceable. The provision relating to contracts for the sale of land was one of several types of promises and agreements which were dealt with similarly. These provisions were aimed at reducing the opportunity for fraud which was presented by the civil justice system of the time. The rules relating to admissibility of evidence, among other aspects of the system, facilitated the efforts of individuals who sought to assert false claims based upon breach of contract when in fact no contract had been made. The drafters of the Statute of Frauds addressed this problem by providing that no action could be brought upon certain types of agreements, including contracts for the sale of land, unless the agreement had been reduced to writing.

The framework for conveyancing which was established by the English Statute of Frauds prevailed in New Jersey during colonial times and continued after the Revolution. The Statute of Frauds was one of the first English statutes to be expressly adopted by the New Jersey legislature. See An Act for the prevention of frauds and perjuries, 26th November 1794, Paterson's Laws 133-36 (1800). It is one of the most frequently applied provisions of the New Jersey statutes, and a large body of case law has developed which interprets its provisions.

Over the two centuries since its enactment into law in New Jersey, judicial interpretation has significantly altered the literal terms of the statute. From the earliest times situations presented themselves to the courts in which strict interpretation of the Statute of Frauds land provisions would produce unfair results. Under the general rubric that "the Statute of Frauds should not be used to work a fraud," the courts in New Jersey and elsewhere developed so-called equitable exceptions to the application of the Statute to conveyances, to trusts, and to contracts for the sale of land. Thus, although present conveyances of an interest in land are "void" under the Statute if not in writing, courts have held that a grantor in a parol transaction may be estopped to complain of the lack of a writing in a limited but significant number of circumstances. Contracts for the sale of land are declared unenforceable by section 5(d), but by judicial construction they are enforced in many situations. The source sections concerning trusts in land invalidate parol trusts unless their "creation or declaration" can be "proven" by a writing. Nevertheless, parol trusts are enforced in many situations by the application of the judicially-constructed fictions of resulting trust and constructive trust. As a broad generalization, it can be said that the reason that these Statute of Frauds provisions governing land transactions have been modified so significantly by judicial construction is that their underlying purposes are not always served by strict application of their literal terms.

This revised statute attempts to retain those concepts in the source statute which have continuing validity and to place them in a more logical framework, one which more accurately reflects the changes that have been brought about by 200 years of judicial interpretation and by other changes in the law. This revised statute retains the fundamental distinction embodied in the source statute between a present conveyance in land and an agreement for the sale of land. The conveyance of an interest in land is an actual transfer of an interest and the revised statute continues to require that the such a transaction be effectuated by a writing. As was the case in 1677, there is a strong governmental and public interest in the publicity of present transactions in land, and those interests continue to the present day. The recording system, which is the cornerstone of the present-day title security system, depends upon the requirement that transfers of an interest in land be in writing. The revised statute contains a limited exception, however, analogous to the estoppel rule developed under the source statute; under certain circumstances, the grantor who enters into an oral transaction may not take advantage of the rule that an unwritten conveyance is void.

A new approach for agreements to convey an interest in real estate is offered by the revised statute. The source statute was drafted in a time prior to the development of modern evidence law. The drafters hoped to discourage perjury in litigation over parol agreements by imposing an absolute prohibition on enforcing an unwritten agreement. This absolute approach was abandoned early in the life of the statute as it became apparent that an absolute prohibition created as much injustice as it prevented. In the case of parol agreements for the sale of land, the development of equitable exceptions to unenforceability mitigated the injustices resulting from absolute unenforceability, but the development of the exceptions has been inconsistent and confusing. The approach of the revised statute is to permit proof of parol agreements. The standard for enforceability is not tied to ancient equity law but to modern evidence law. A parol agreement is considered enforceable between the parties to the agreement if it can be proved by clear and convincing evidence.

A new approach is also offered for trusts in real estate. Under the source statute trusts in real estate were covered by source sections 3 and 4, which expressed rules that combined the concepts of voidability and unenforceability. The judicial interpretation of the source sections resulted in a body of law that has managed to achieve fair results only through the application of the convoluted legal fictions of resulting trust and constructive trust. In this revised statute, a trust in land is treated as a present transfer of an interest which may be coupled with an agreement to transfer an interest or to hold it in trust. This statute treats these aspects of a trust according to the same rules applicable to other present conveyances and other agreements to convey, respectively. The result in most cases will be identical to that under the source statute, but the analysis will be more straightforward.

Section 1 - Definitions

a. An interest in real estate is any right, title or estate in real estate. It includes a lease of real estate, a lien on real estate, a profit, an easement, an interest in a trust in real estate, and a share in a cooperative apartment.

b. A transfer of ownership of an interest in real estate is the sale, gift, creation or extinguishment of an interest in real estate.

Source: R.S. 25:1-1, 25:1-2, 25:1-3, 25:1-4, 25:1-5(d)

COMMENT

Interest in real estate. This definition is noninclusive; it is derived from Orrok v. Parmigiani, 32 N.J. Super. 70 (App. Div. 1954), in which the court construed section 5(d) of the source statute, the provision concerning contracts for sale of "an interest in land" to include contracts for the sale of "any right, title, or estate in, or lien on, real estate," while excluding from that term "agreements which, though affecting lands, do not contemplate the transfer of any title, ownership or possession." 32 N.J. Super. at 75. Section 1 of the source statute has been held to apply to the conveyance of full title to land, Mayberry v. Johnson, 15 N.J.L. 116, 119 (Sup. Ct. 1835), and it has been held to apply as well to the creation of a life estate, Thomas v. Thomas, 20 N. J. Misc. 419 (Ch. 1942), a lien, Nixon v. Nixon, 100 N.J. Eq. 437 (Ch. 1928), and an easement, Sergi v. Carew, 18 N.J. Super. 307 (Ch. 1952); Annunziata v. Millar, 241 N.J. Super. 275, 289 (Ch. Div. 1990). This definition does not include a license. See Forbes v. Forbes, 137 N.J. Eq. 520 (E. & A. 1946), in which the Court of Errors and Appeals held that a parol license may be granted but a license by its nature is merely a revocable permission which may be withdrawn at any time. A so-called irrevocable license is in fact an easement, however, which is included in the definition. Kearny v. Municipal Sanitary Landfill Authority, 143 N.J. Super. 449, 459 (Law Div. 1976).

Interest in a trust in real estate. An interest in a trust in real estate is expressly included in the definition of an interest in real estate. Under the source statutes, trusts in real estate were treated in two separate sections, which facilitated the development of convoluted and confusing rules concerning the enforceability of parol trusts. For example, a parol trust was considered invalid, but a later, written "declaration" of the trust was considered to relate back to the creation of the trust by parol and render the trust valid as against the judgment creditors and heirs of the grantor. See, e.g., Coles v. Osback, 13 N.J. Super. 367, 371 (Ch. Div. 1951), rev'd on application of facts, 22 N.J. Super. 358 (App. Div. 1952). In the proposed statute, the reference to an interest in a trust in real estate in the definition of an interest in real estate is included in order to change the existing rule, to make clear that insofar as a trust in real estate involves the creation or extinguishment of an interest in real estate it must satisfy the requirements imposed by section 2 of the proposed statute on all transactions involving an interest in real estate. Thus, the creation of a parol trust is not effective to transfer ownership of an interest in land. It may, however, be enforceable under section 4 of the proposed statute. Section 4 provides that an agreement to transfer an interest in real estate or to hold an interest in real estate for the benefit of another must either be in writing, or must be proved by clear and convincing evidence, in order to be enforceable. This section is intended to make parol trusts in real estate enforceable according to their terms if they can be proved by clear and convincing evidence. This change is intended to eliminate the necessity for the application of the doctrines of resulting trust and constructive trust in cases involving parol express trusts. See, e.g., Moses v. Moses, 140 N.J. Eq. 575 (E. & A. 1947). Thus, for example, if a grantor transfers legal title to real estate to a trustee subject to an oral agreement that the trustee will reconvey the legal title to the beneficiary of the trust, either the grantor or the beneficiary can enforce the agreement according to its terms if the agreement to reconvey can be proved by clear and convincing evidence under proposed section 4. Enforcing the agreement according to its terms means that either the grantor or the beneficiary can compel the trustee to reconvey to legal title to the beneficiary. One peculiarity of the prior law was that in such circumstances the property would be reconveyed to the grantor, not to the beneficiary.

Transfer of ownership of an interest in real estate. Source section 5(d), the provision concerning contracts for the sale of an interest in land, has been held to apply to contracts to convey full title, e.g., Bernstein v. Rosenzweig, 1 N.J. Super. 48 (App. Div. 1948), and it has been held to require a writing for an agreement authorizing the removal of sand, Brehan v. O'Donnell, 36 N.J.L. 257 (Sup. Ct. 1873), or the removal of timber; Slocum v. Seymour, 36 N.J.L. 138, 13 Am. Rep. 432 (Sup. Ct. 1873), an agreement to allow the construction of buildings on land; Smith v. Smith's Administrators, 28 N.J.L. 208, 78 Am. Dec. 49 (Sup. Ct. 1860), an agreement to partition land, e.g., Woodhull v. Longstreet, 18 N.J.L. 405 (Sup. Ct. 1841); Lloyd v. Conover, 25 N.J.L. 47 (Sup. Ct. 1855), an agreement to make a mortgage on realty, Feldman v. Warshawsky, 125 N.J. Eq. 19 (E. & A. 1938), or to release a mortgage, Jos. S. Naame Co. v. Louis Satanov Real Estate & Mortgage Corp., 103 N.J. Eq. 386 (Ch. 1928), aff'd 109 N.J. Eq. 165 (E. & A. 1929), an agreement to devise land, e.g., Lozier v. Hill, 68 N.J. Eq. 300 (Ch. 1904); Klockner v. Green, 54 N.J. 230 (1969), an agreement to purchase a share in a cooperative apartment, Presten v. Sailer, 225 N.J. Super. 178 (App. Div. 1988), an option to purchase real estate, Sutton v. Lienau, 225 N.J. Super. 293, 299 (App. Div. 1988), and an agreement to sell a business which includes land, where the agreement is entire and indivisible, Kufta v. Hughson, 46 N.J. Super. 222, 231 (Ch. Div. 1957).

Gift Transaction. Source section 1 has been applied to gift transactions as well as to sale transactions. Aiello v. Knoll Golf Club, 64 N.J. Super. 156 (App. Div. 1960).

Section 2 - Writing requirement, conveyances of an interest in real estate

a. A transaction intended to transfer ownership of an interest in real estate is not effective to transfer ownership of the interest unless:

(1) a description of the real estate sufficient to identify it, the nature of the interest, the fact of the transfer and the identity of the transferor and the transferee are established in a writing signed by or on behalf of the transferor; or

(2) the transferor has placed the transferee in possession of the real estate as a result of the transaction and the transferee has either paid all or part of the consideration for the transfer or has reasonably relied on the effectiveness of the transfer to the transferee's detriment.

b. A transaction which does not satisfy the requirements of this section is not enforceable except as an agreement to transfer an interest in real estate under section 4 of this Act.

c. This section does not apply to leases.

d. This section does not apply to the creation of easements by prescription or implication.

Source: R.S. 25:1-1, 25:1-2

COMMENT

This section combines the rules of source sections 1 and 2, and applies to all manner of transactions involving an interest in real estate (other than leases, which are dealt with in a separate section): the sale of a fee interest in real estate, the creation of a trust in real estate, a gift of an interest in real estate, and the extinguishment of any interest in real estate. Subsection (a) states the general rule that no transfer of ownership occurs in a parol transaction. Transactions involving an interest in real estate are ineffective to transfer ownership unless they are in a writing which satisfies a number of minimum requirements: the writing must establish the fact of the transfer, the identity of the transferor and the transferee, the identity of the real estate and the nature of the interest being conveyed, and it must be signed.

Signed by the transferor, by the transferor's agent, or by a person authorized by law to execute the writing. This provision changes the rule of source section 1, which required that if the writing was signed by an agent, the agent's authority had to be in writing as well. A writing is sufficient under this section if it is signed by the transferor or by the transferor's agent, or by a person authorized by law to execute the writing. Good practice as well as the requirements of lenders, title insurance companies and grantees undoubtedly will continue to demand that an agent's authority be reduced to writing, but written authority will not be required to satisfy this statute. Questions concerning the validity and extent of a particular agent's authority will be dealt with under otherwise applicable law. See also proposed section 4, which also provides for signature by an agent of an agreement for the conveyance of an interest in real estate.

Note that other applicable principles of law may require that a writing transferring an interest in real estate satisfy additional requirements. For example, a deed signed by the transferor of property but not acknowledged would satisfy the requirements of this section but would not satisfy the requirements of the Recording Statute, R.S. 46:15-1.

Subsection (a) of this section incorporates judicial interpretations of the source statute to the effect that, in some cases, the owner of an interest in real estate who conveys an interest in land in a parol transaction may not take advantage of the rule that such a transaction is ineffective unless it is in writing. This is a very limited exception, applying only in those situations in which the transferor has placed the transferee in possession as a result of the parol transaction and the transferee has either paid consideration for the transfer or has detrimentally relied upon the validity of the transfer. The second situation, detrimental reliance, encompasses completed gift transactions.

Subsection (b) makes clear that the transferee in a parol transaction which does not satisfy the exception provided in subsection (a), e.g., because the transferee has not taken possession, may be able to enforce the transaction under proposed section 4 if the transaction involved an enforceable agreement and its terms can be proved by clear and convincing evidence. Under this section, a parol declaration of a trust will not suffice to transfer ownership of an interest in land. A parol trust may, however, be enforceable as an agreement under section 4 if it can be proved by clear and convincing evidence.

Subsection (c) removes leases from the compass of this section; they are governed by proposed Section 3.

Subsection (d) excepts easements by implication or prescription from this section. Under New Jersey law, easements may be created either by express conveyance, by implication, or by prescription. Leach v. Anderl, 218 N.J. Super. 18, 24 (App. Div. 1987), citing Mahony v. Danis, 95 N.J. 50, 58 (Law Div. 1976). An express easement is created by "a transaction intended to transfer ownership," therefore it falls under the language of proposed section 2(a) and a writing is required. This is consistent with present law. See, e.g., Annunziata v. Millar, 241 N.J. Super. 275 (Ch. 1990).

Easements created by implication and prescription traditionally are considered to be outside the Statute of Frauds and proposed section (d) is intended to continue that rule. While they do not fall under the language of proposed section 2(a) as they do not involve "a transaction intended to transfer ownership," there is language in some cases to the effect that the constructive intent of the parties to a transaction gives rise to an easement by necessity. Compare Mahony v. Danis, 95 N.J. at 59 (Schreiber, J., dissenting), citing Blumberg v. Weiss, 129 N.J. Eq. 460 (Ch.), aff'd, 130 N.J. Eq. 203 (E. & A. 1941), with Leach v. Anderl, 218 N.J. Super. at 25; Old Falls, Inc. v. Johnson, 88 N.J. Super, 441, 451 (App. Div. 1965). Therefore, caution dictates the inclusion of proposed subsection 2(d) to make it clear that this proposed statute is not intended to effect any change in the law concerning easements by implication or by prescription.

Section 3 - Writing requirement, leases

A transaction intended to create a lease of real estate for more than three years is not enforceable unless:

a. the leased premises, the term of the lease and the identity of the lessor and the lessee are established in a writing signed by or on behalf of the party against whom enforcement is sought; or

b. the real estate, the term of the lease and the identity of the lessor and the lessee are proved by clear and convincing evidence.

Source: R.S. 25:1-1, 25:1-5(d)

COMMENT

Section 1 of the source statute expressly included leases, and a lease has historically been considered to be an estate in land. In recent years, however, courts have struggled with the fact that modern leases, both residential and commercial, often have more of the characteristics of a contractual agreement than a conveyance of an estate. See, e.g., Sommer v. Kridel, 74 N.J. 446 (1977); Ringwood Associates, Ltd., v. Jack's of Route 23, 153 N.J. Super. 294 (Law Div. 1977). In the context of imposing a writing requirement, the hybrid nature of a lease becomes problematic as well. This problem is reflected in the cases decided under the source statute. In one nineteenth century case the court treated an unsigned lease as an executory contract where the lessee had taken possession, and granted the lessor damages for breach of the lease under the equitable doctrine of part performance. Wharton v. Stoutenburgh, 35 N.J. Eq. 266 (E. & A. 1882). An early twentieth century case refused to use a contractual analysis, however, and held that an unsigned lease for more than three years, under which the lessee had taken possession, paid rent, and made improvements, would not be enforced on contract principles. Clement v. Young-McShea, 69 N.J. Eq. 347 (Ch. 1905). Two recent cases have taken opposite points of view on the treatment of parol leases for more than three years. In Brechman v. Admar, 182 N.J. Super. 259 (Ch. Div. 1981) the court refused to enforce a lease for five years where there was a signed writing that did not satisfy the writing requirement of source section 1 because it did not include the commencement date or term of the lease. The court refused to allow testimony to prove those terms, and also refused to enforce the lease on part performance grounds because the acts taken by the lessee (payment of a deposit, hiring an architect, preparation of blueprints) were considered to be merely preparatory and not in performance of the lease. In Deutsch v. Budget Rent-A-Car, 213 N.J. Super. 385 (App. Div. 1986) the court enforced a partly-performed oral lease for more than three years where the lessee had taken possession and made substantial improvements. The court stated that part performance of the lease was relevant if the acts of part performance "provide a reliable indication that the parties have made an agreement of the general nature sought to be enforced." Proposed section 3 states a separate rule for leases, obviating the necessity to distinguish between their contract and conveyance aspects.

This section sets a different standard for enforceability of parol lease than is set in section 2 for a transaction involving an interest in land. Under proposed section 2 a parol conveyance of an interest in land is effective if the transferee has taken possession of the real estate. It is the Commission's view that in the context of determining whether a parol lease should be enforceable, possession by the lessee is only one factor which may be considered. Possession by a lessee is certainly probative of some lessor-lessee relationship, but possession of itself is likely to be ambiguous as to the length of the lease as well as to other lease terms. As a result, the Commission decided not to impose any single preclusive requirement such as possession for enforceability of a parol lease. See the parallel provision on enforcement of agreements, proposed section 4, which also rejects preclusive requirements for enforceability.

Commissioner Rosen favors an additional requirement - i.e., that the lessor has placed the lessee in possession - for the following reasons. First, cases which enforce parol leases cited above all involve fact situations in which the tenant had, in fact, been placed in possession of the premises. Second, in Commissioner Rosen's view, adding a requirement of possession would make the rule for leases consistent with that for conveyances in proposed section 2.

Section 4 - Enforceability of agreements regarding real estate

An agreement to transfer an interest in real estate or to hold an interest in real estate for the benefit of another is not enforceable unless:

- a. a description of the real estate sufficient to identify it, the nature of the interest to be transferred, the existence of the agreement, and the identity of the transferor and the transferee are established in a writing signed by or on behalf of the party against whom enforcement is sought; or
- b. a description of the real estate sufficient to identify it, the nature of the interest to be transferred, the existence of the agreement and the identity of the transferor and the transferee are proved by clear and convincing evidence.

Source: R.S. 25:1-3, 25:1-4, 25:1-5(d)

COMMENT

This proposed section is intended to change significantly the statutory rule applicable to the enforcement of parol agreements involving real estate. The source statute provides that contracts for the sale of real estate are not enforceable unless they are in writing. The original purpose of the rule was to discourage the fraudulent assertion of contracts that were never made, but the courts realized soon after the Statute of Frauds was enacted that the strict application of the Statute sometimes resulted in the unjust repudiation of contracts that actually were made. The judicially-created exceptions to the writing requirement were developed to mediate the harsh results of strict enforcement but they have been inconsistently applied, resulting in uncertainty and confusion as to how the Statute will be applied in individual cases.

It is the Commission's view that a preclusive writing requirement is neither necessary nor desirable. The rule of the source statute was conceived before the development of modern concepts of evidence, when a party to an alleged contract was disqualified from testifying in court and thus was seriously hampered in repudiating an alleged contract that was never made; a preclusive writing requirement was a rational approach in that ancient context, but is no longer valid as a general approach to this category of agreements.

The Commission believes that the focus of inquiry in a situation involving an agreement for the sale of an interest in real estate or to hold an interest in real estate for the benefit of another should be whether an agreement has been made between the parties by which they intend to be bound. The intent of parties to be bound usually is manifested by a signed written agreement, but as the history of the Statute shows, in some circumstances parties enter into binding agreements without such a formal manifestation of their assent. Under this proposed section parol agreements are not enforceable unless they are in writing or unless they can be proved by clear and convincing evidence. Thus, if an agreement has not been reduced to a writing which satisfies the minimal requirements of this section, the agreement must be proved by a high standard of proof. The Commission considered and rejected the approach of codifying the traditional requirements of "part performance" or "detrimental reliance," as unnecessarily limiting. The history of the interpretation of the Statute of Frauds shows that courts have had to struggle to fit individual cases into the traditional exceptions, often doing violence to the principles of precedent and stare decisis, in order to achieve just results in cases in which it was clear that there was in fact an agreement between the parties. Equally troubling are the cases in which the courts, admitting the existence of an agreement between the parties, refused to enforce it because of the situation failed to fit precisely within one of the recognized exceptions, often on technical grounds.

It is important to note that this section of the proposed statute is stated in the negative; that is, an agreement is not enforceable unless it satisfies the writing requirement or unless it is proved by clear and convincing evidence. This proposed section sets a threshold requirement for enforceability but it does not include all of the requirements for enforceability which might be imposed by other applicable principles of law. Thus, for example, the fact that an agreement is manifested by a signed writing does not preclude a party from showing that one of the parties lacked the capacity to contract or that the enforcement of the agreement would be against public policy. Similarly, proof by clear and convincing evidence of all of the elements of a parol agreement outlined in this proposed section does not preclude a party from resisting the enforcement of the agreement by raising defenses such as lack of capacity or violation of public policy.

Clear and convincing evidence. This proposed section expressly requires that, in the absence of a writing, the existence of an agreement between the parties as well as its essential terms must be proved by clear and convincing evidence. The circumstances surrounding a transaction, the nature of the transaction, the relationship between the parties, their contemporaneous statements and prior dealings, if any, all are relevant to a determination of whether the parties made an agreement by which they intended to be bound. Thus, if the parties in question have been negotiating the sale of a multi-million dollar office building over many months through the exchange of a series of redrafted written contracts, it is unlikely that the parties intended to be bound other than in writing. Conversely, if the parties in question have engaged in a series of "handshake" agreements for the purchase and sale of individual building lots in the past, and have honored them in the absence of any writing, their prior conduct could tend to show that they intended to enter into a binding oral agreement. Intent to enter into a binding agreement might also be shown by the actions of the parties in performance of the agreement or even by actions defined in case law under the source statute as ancillary to the performance of the agreement. In Deutsch v. Budget Rent-A-Car, 213 N.J. Super. 385 (App. Div. 1986), the Appellate Division treated the part performance of a parol lease as evidence of the parties' agreement that the lease was for more than three years. The court commented that the doctrine of part performance should be applied to enforce a parol agreement "if part performance provides a reliable indication that the parties have made an agreement of the general nature sought to be enforced."

Consideration. Whether the consideration need be included in an agreement for the sale of land is unclear under present law. R.S. 25:1-8, which was not part of the original Statute of Frauds but was added in 1874, states a general rule that "the consideration of any promise, contract or agreement required to be put in writing by sections 25:1-1 to 25:1-7 of this title, need not be set forth or expressed in such writing, but may be proved by any other legal evidence." This would appear to provide that an agreement for the sale of an interest in land need not include the purchase price, but case law does not bear out this interpretation consistently. Compare Nibert v. Baghurst, 47 N.J. Eq. 201 (Ch. 1890) ("Since [the adoption of this section in 1874] it is not necessary that the consideration of a contract, coming within the statute, should be set out in the memorandum") with Johnson v. Lambert, 109 N.J. Eq. 88, 90 (E. & A. 1931) ("It is well settled that the memorandum in writing of a contract for sale of lands must contain the full terms of the contract--that is, the names of the buyer and seller, the subject of the sale, the price, the terms of credit, and the conditions of sale, if any there be.") (dicta). Under this proposed section the consideration need not be included in the writing establishing the agreement.

Commissioner Rosen believes that an agreement for the conveyance of an interest in real estate or to hold an interest in real estate for the benefit of another should not be enforceable solely because the agreement can be proved by clear and convincing evidence. In Commissioner Rosen's view, the present law requires also that there be present either part performance or detrimental reliance. These are additional and - in his view - essential equitable principles that justify departure from the requirement of a writing. To enforce parol agreements to convey, hold or lease real estate without compelling equitable circumstances, in Commissioner Rosen's opinion, would be contrary to the reasonable expectations of participants in real estate transactions and would encourage perjury in litigation.

Section 5 - Effect of unwritten transactions

Transactions involving an interest in real estate, and agreements for the transfer of an interest in real estate or to hold an interest in real estate for the benefit of another, which are not established in a writing, are not effective against bona fide purchasers for valuable consideration without notice or lienors without notice.

COMMENT

Both under present law and under this proposed section there are circumstances under which unwritten transactions will affect the ownership of interest in real estate. Inherently such transactions are not recordable and thus they fall outside of the Recording Statute, leaving open the possibility that they may be effective against third parties. See Zwaska v. Irwin, 52 N.J. Super. 27 (Ch. Div. 1958) (parol trust in real estate defeated federal tax lien; Recording Statute does not affect rights in property which are not represented by a deed or instrument). This proposed section assures that unwritten transactions are no more efficacious against third parties than written but unrecorded transactions. This proposed section is intended to reverse the rule of Zwaska v. Irwin.

The Contracts Provisions of the Statute of Frauds

Section 4 of the English Statute of Frauds is one of a number of sections of the original statute that were concerned particularly with suppressing perjury.<sup>2</sup> That section, now section 5 of the New Jersey Statute, provided that "no action may be brought" upon any of five enumerated types of agreements unless the agreement was in writing or there was a written note or memorandum of it. The enumerated types of agreements were those by an executor or administrator of an estate to pay damages out of his own estate, agreements to answer for the debt of another, agreements made upon consideration of marriage, agreements for the sale of an interest in land (discussed above), and agreements not to be performed within a year from their making.

---

<sup>2</sup> Another provision of the English Statute which was concerned with suppressing perjury was section 17, which provided that no contract for the sale of goods of a value of more than ten pounds would be valid unless in writing or evidenced by a writing. Section 17 is the predecessor to Section 2-201 of the Uniform Commercial Code, 12A:2-201, which is outside of the scope of this project.

Although it is generally agreed that section 4 of the English statute was intended to suppress perjury,<sup>3</sup> this bare statement of purpose is not helpful in understanding why these particular categories of agreements were singled out for special treatment. With respect to promises of executors and administrators, it has been theorized these promises were included because it was much more common for such a promise to be made, and to be important, in the seventeenth century. Executors and administrators benefitted personally from estates, and there was little compulsion for them to make distributions from an estate. The wide discretion which they enjoyed, coupled with limitations upon the kinds of claims that could legally be made against an estate, made it more likely that an executor or administrator would make, or be claimed to have made, a personal promise to satisfy a claim.<sup>4</sup>

Contracts of suretyship and contracts not to be performed within a year may have been included because they were continuing contracts, which made them more susceptible to the defects in the judicial system of the time, and contracts for the sale of an interest in land, as well as contracts in consideration of marriage, which commonly involved the transfer of real property interests, were included as corollaries to the separate sections on interests in land.<sup>5</sup>

Given the lack of explanatory legislative history it is impossible to say whether specific policy choices motivated the adoption of the New Jersey version of the Statute of Frauds in 1794. It is more likely that the adoption of the Statute was part of the ongoing attempt during that formative period to replicate generally many of the aspects of the English legal system that were considered important. Moreover, it is difficult to say whether the same kinds of evidentiary problems affected litigation involving these kinds of claims in local courts of the time. What is clear is that concern with the assertion of unfounded claims based on parol agreements continued into the nineteenth century. This concern is evidenced by the virtually simultaneous addition of three entirely new provisions to the Statute of Frauds within a two-year period. All three sections paralleled section 4 of the English Statute in that they made certain kinds of promises unenforceable unless in writing. The first provision, enacted in 1873, concerned promises to pay a debt discharged in bankruptcy. Both of the other sections were

---

<sup>3</sup> 6 W. Holdsworth, A History of English Law 379-93 (2d ed. reprinted 1977); accord Teeven, Seventeenth Century Evidentiary Concerns and the Statute of Frauds, 9 Adelaide L. Rev. 252 (1983). Holdsworth theorizes that the concern of the drafters with suppressing perjury arose out of the fact that rules of procedure and evidence were in transition at the time the Statute was adopted. Reaction to the defects in the jury system of the time had given rise to restrictions on the admission of certain kinds of testimony. In particular, the parties to an action frequently were not permitted to testify, leaving defendants unable to refute claims supported by perjured testimony. The approach of the Statute was to require certain types of transactions to be capable of proof only by a writing, to preclude wrongdoers from being able to prosecute a manufactured claim on the basis of perjured testimony alone.

<sup>4</sup> Holdsworth, supra at 390-93.

<sup>5</sup> Holdsworth, supra at 390-93.

enacted as part of the 1874 revision. These sections imposed a writing requirement on promises to pay debts contracted during infancy, and on real estate broker contracts. The provisions on real estate broker contracts, section 9 of the present statute, will be dealt with separately below. See proposed section 6 and comment.

Developments in law and in social policy have changed the context in which these provisions now operate, and each provision must be reconsidered individually in light of past experience and present circumstances. Modern commentators have identified three purposes, summarized in the Restatement (Second) of Contracts, which writing requirements may serve with respect to contracts, agreements and promises: a evidentiary purpose of providing "reliable evidence of the existence and terms of the contract"; a cautionary purpose of discouraging precipitous or "ill-considered" action; and a channeling function which "has helped to create a climate in which parties often regard their agreements as tentative until there is a signed writing." Restatement (Second) of Contracts, Statutory Note 281, 286.

Sections recommended for revision and retention:

R.S. 25:1 5(b) - Promise to Answer for the Debt of Another

Subsection 5(b) of the New Jersey Statute of Frauds provides that "A special promise to answer for the debt, default or miscarriage of another person" must be in writing in order to be enforceable. In a recent case involving a claim by a creditor that an officer of an insolvent corporation had agreed to be liable for the corporation's debt, the court commented that it was the fear of fabricated oral assurances in this type of situation which led to the inclusion of this subsection in the Statute.<sup>6</sup> The Restatement (Second) of Contracts adds that this subsection serves a "cautionary function of guarding the promisor against ill-considered action."<sup>7</sup>

The Commission recommends that this provision of the Statute be retained. It applies to a relatively narrow, definable class of promises which result in a person assuming responsibility for the underlying obligation of another. Because this type of promise is one in which by definition no consideration moves to the promisor, the cautionary and channeling functions of a writing requirement are particularly applicable. In some contexts, it also has an important consumer protection function.

Section 6 - Liability for the obligation of another.

A promise to be liable for the obligation of another person, in order to be enforceable, shall be in a writing signed by the person assuming the liability or by that person's agent. The consideration for the promise need not be stated in the writing.

Source: R.S. 25:1-5(a), 25:1-5(b), 25:1-8

---

<sup>6</sup> Van Dam Egg Co. v. Allendale Farms, Inc., 199 N.J. Super. 452, 458-459 (App.Div. 1985).

<sup>7</sup> Restatement (Second) of Contracts sec. 112.

COMMENT

Purpose of the provision. Like source section R.S. 25:1-5(b), this proposed section has an evidentiary purpose, Van Dam Egg Co. v. Allendale Farms, Inc., 199 N.J. Super. 452, 458-459 (App.Div. 1985)(the source section discourages fabricated claims); a cautionary purpose, Restatement (Second) of Contracts, Statutory Note at 281, 286 ("guarding the promisor against ill-considered action") and a channeling function. Id. ("it has helped create a climate in which parties often regard their agreements as tentative until there is a signed writing.")

"Debt of another." The main issue upon which cases under this subsection turn is whether there is a "principal obligation 'of another' than the promisor. The promisor must promise as a surety for the principal obligor" in order for the promise to be within the Statute. Restatement (Second) of Contracts sec. 112, at 293. This provisions does not apply to a promise which amounts to a separate undertaking which involves new consideration and is largely for the promisor's personal benefit. Restatement (Second) of Contracts sec. 112, at 293; Schoor Associates v. Holmdel Heights Construction Co., 68 N.J. 95, 106 (1975).

An early statement of the general rule concerning the types of promises that fall within the Statute's writing requirement is that such promises are collateral, they secondarily obligate the promisor, and they lack new consideration. Thus, where two persons promised to sign a note to pay a third person's debt, where no new consideration moved to them, the promise to sign the note was unenforceable. Wills v. Shinn, 42 N.J.L. 138, 140 (Sup. Ct. 1880). Within this general rule, courts have developed various tests to determine the applicability of the Statute. In the most recent New Jersey Supreme Court opinion on this subject the court discussed the various tests and applied the "leading object or main purpose rule":

When the leading object of the promise or agreement is to become guarantor or surety to the promisee for a debt for which a third party is and continues to be primarily liable, the agreement, whether made before or after or at the time with the promise of the principal, is within the statute, and not binding unless evidenced by writing. On the other hand, when the leading object of the promisor is to subserve some interest or purpose of his own, notwithstanding the effect is to pay or discharge the debt of another, his promise is not within the statute.

Schoor Associates v. Holmdel Heights Construction Co., 68 N.J. 95, 106 (1975). In adopting this rule, the court considered and rejected a number of other tests that have been applied by courts or supported by commentators, including the credit test utilized in Romano v. Brown, and the surety test "supported by Professor Williston and others." Id. at 104.

Novations. Because the promise must be one to be a surety, the statute does not apply to novations. See Emerson N.Y. - N.J., Inc. v. Brookwood T.V., 122 N.J. Super. 288, 295 (Law Div. 1973) where the court defined a novation as a transaction "whereby one person promises to assume the debt of another in consideration that the original debtor be discharged therefrom, and the creditor substitutes the promisor in place of the original debtor and extinguishes his debt." In order for a novation to be accomplished, "The discharge of the debtor must be full and complete, operating as an extinguishment of the debt at the time the new promise is made, and as a consideration therefor; but an agreement whereby one guarantor or surety is substituted for another is not within the statute of frauds, although the obligation of the original debtor is not extinguished." 122 N.J. Super. at 295.

Releases. This subsection does not apply to releases. Emerson v. N.Y. - N.J., Inc. v. Brookwood T.V., 122 N.J. Super. 288, 293 (Law Div. 1973). The court commented that "The statute applies to 'a special promise to answer for the debt, default or miscarriage of another person' (N.J.S.A. 25:1-5(b)) but it is silent concerning a release from such a promise. Therefore, although a writing may have been required for the guaranty originally, a release from that obligation could be accomplished orally, notwithstanding the statute of frauds."

Executors and administrators. The Commission is recommending repeal of subsection 5(a) of the present statute, R.S. 25:1-5(c) (see discussion below), which requires a writing to enforce the promise of an executor or administrator to be liable for the debt of an estate. Such promises, to the extent that they constitute promises to be liable for the obligation of another, will fall under this proposed section.

Consideration. The provision that the consideration for a promise falling under this section need not be stated in the writing is taken from R.S. 25:1-8. See further discussion of the history of that provision below.

R.S. 25:1-5(c) - Agreements Made Upon Consideration of Marriage

Subsection 5(c) requires a writing to enforce a contract made upon consideration of marriage, that is, a promise in which part or all of the consideration is marriage or a promise to marry. The basic principle of this subsection, that agreements made in consideration of marriage must be writing in order to be enforceable, has been litigated through the years in factually diverse situations.<sup>8</sup> This subsection has been held not to bar the enforcement of parol agreements between unmarried couples, because the consideration in such cases is not marriage but services rendered in return for promises of future support.<sup>9</sup>

This category of agreements may have been included in the English Statute because they typically involved transfers of real property interests and thus requiring a writing was consistent with the conveyancing and other land sections.<sup>10</sup> In the modern context this provision serves the evidentiary, cautionary and channeling purposes identified as supporting the imposition of a writing requirement.<sup>11</sup>

---

<sup>8</sup> The statute has been held to bar actions on parol promises made in consideration of marriage by a wife who agreed to apply her assets to expenses of her future husband and herself if he would marry her at an early date, Alexander v. Alexander, 96 N.J. Eq. 10, 14 (Ch. 1924); by a prospective spouse to adopt the other spouse's child, Elmer v. Wellbrook, 110 N.J. Eq. 15, 18 (Ch. 1932); by a husband to convey his dwelling to his wife after marriage, Herr v. Herr, 13 N.J. 79, 87 (1953); by a husband to give his prospective bride a home and a housekeeper, Gilbert v. Gilbert, 66 N.J. Super. 246, 251-252 (App. Div. 1961); by a wife that her husband's mother would come from Hungary and live with them, Koch v. Koch, 95 N.J. Super. 546, 550 (App. Div. 1967). This subsection barred a wife from claiming a death benefit from the husband's employer on the basis of a parol antenuptial agreement, where the husband's niece was a properly-named beneficiary. Pennsylvania Railroad Co. v. Warren, 69 N.J. Eq. 706, 709 (Ch. 1905), and also barred a wife from varying the terms of her husband's will by parol testimony of an antenuptial agreement. Russell v. Russell, 60 N.J. Eq. 282 (Ch. 1900), aff'd, 63 N.J. Eq. 282 (E. & A. 1901).

<sup>9</sup> Kozłowski v. Kozłowski, 164 N.J. Super. 162, 177 (Ch. Div. 1978), aff'd, 80 N.J. 378 (1979); Crowe v. Degoia, 203 N.J. Super. 22, 34 (App. Div. 1985), aff'd, 102 N.J. 50 (1986).

<sup>10</sup> W. Holdsworth, supra, at 392.

<sup>11</sup> See Manning v. Riley, 52 N.J. Eq. 39 (Ch. 1893) ("The purpose of the statute is ... to render hasty and inconsiderate oral promises, made to induce marriage, without legal force, and thus to give protection against the consequences of rashness and folly.").

The Uniform Premarital Agreement Act, C, 37:2-31 to -41, supersedes this subsection with respect to premarital agreements executed on and after its effective date. In addition to imposing a writing requirement on premarital agreements, the Uniform Act imposes additional formal requirements and substantive limitations as well. Subsection 5(c) will continue to be applicable, however, to premarital agreements entered into prior to the effective date of the Uniform Act, and therefore it will be of importance for many years to come. The Commission therefore recommends that subsection 5(c) of the present statute be retained as part of the codified law, and amended to clearly reflect the fact that it has been prospectively superseded by the Uniform Act.

R.S. 25:1-5. Promises or agreements not binding unless in writing

No action shall be brought upon any of the following agreements or promises, unless the agreement or promise, upon which such action shall be brought or some memorandum or note thereof, shall be in writing, and signed by the party to be charged therewith, or by some other person thereunto by him lawfully authorized:

[a. A special promise of an executor or administrator to answer damages out of his own estate;

b. A special promise to answer for the debt, default or miscarriage of another person;]

c. An agreement made upon consideration of marriage entered into prior to the effective date of the Uniform Premarital Agreement Act, P.L.1988, c.99];

d. A contract or sale of real estate, or any interest in or concerning the same; or

e. An agreement that is not to be performed within one year from the making thereof].<sup>12</sup>

Sections recommended to be repealed:

R.S. 25:1-5(a) Promise of an executor or administrator

Subsection 5(a) of the present New Jersey Statute of Frauds requires a writing to enforce an agreement of an executor or administrator to be personally liable for damages. The Commission recommends that this subsection be repealed. Unlike the situation which obtained in the seventeenth century, the responsibilities of fiduciaries to satisfy the claims of creditors and other claimants, and the manner in which those claims are to be satisfied, are covered in detail in the Probate Code.<sup>13</sup> Under present circumstances this subsection is

<sup>12</sup> The amended statute would then read:

"No action shall be brought upon any of the following agreements or promises, unless the agreement or promise, upon which such action shall be brought or some memorandum or note thereof, shall be in writing, and signed by the party to be charged therewith, or by some other person thereunto by him lawfully authorized:

c. An agreement made upon consideration of marriage entered into prior to the effective date of the Uniform Premarital Agreement Act, P.L.1988, c.99."

<sup>13</sup> See, e.g., Title 3B, chapter 22 (payment and proof of claims).

an anomaly in that it treats separately one class of fiduciaries, while promises by other kinds of fiduciaries to be personally liable for debts are covered under subsection 5(b).<sup>14</sup>

The Commission believes that a separate section for this class of fiduciaries is unnecessary,<sup>15</sup> and that agreements by executors and administrators to be personally liable for the obligations of an estate should be treated under proposed section 6, set forth above, as a subspecies of agreements to be liable for the obligation of another.<sup>16</sup>

R.S. 25:1-5(e) - Contracts Not to be Performed Within One Year of Their Making

Subsection 5(e) of the New Jersey Statute of Frauds provides that "[a]n agreement that is not to be performed within one year from the making thereof" must be in writing in order to be enforceable. It has been theorized that this provision was included in the English Statute because, like the provision concerning surety agreements, it is a type of continuing contract which by its nature is more susceptible to the problems of proof which existed in the court system of the time. In Deevy v. Porter, decided by the Supreme Court in 1953, the court in a case involving this subsection commented of the Statute generally that "[i]t was intended to guard against the perils of perjury and error in the spoken word ... and to protect defendants against unfounded and fraudulent claims."<sup>17</sup> The court also referred to an early opinion of an English court which described the policy of the statute as being to prevent "the leaving to memory the terms of a contract for longer time than a year."<sup>18</sup>

Both courts and secondary authorities have commented that the peculiar language chosen by the drafters of the Statute has not served their purpose well because many long-term contracts or continuing contracts have been held to fall outside the Statute.<sup>19</sup> The Restatement Second of Contracts suggests that the inutility of the chosen language has led to a tendency to construe this subsection narrowly.<sup>20</sup>

The Commission recommends that this subsection be repealed as its language prescribes an arbitrary and illogical class that includes only some long-term contracts. While requiring a writing in the case of long-term contracts

<sup>14</sup> See Remington v. Lauter Piano Co., 8 N.J. Misc. 257 (Sup. Ct. 1930)(attorney for trustee liable to pay broker's commission on parol promise because promise was independent undertaking not within Subsection 5(b)); Gallagher v. McBride, 66 N.J.L. 360 (Sup. Ct. 1901)(guardian liable for supplies delivered to ward notwithstanding subsection 5(b) because debt was incurred directly by guardian).

<sup>15</sup> Only two cases were found which apply this subsection. Cochrane v. McEntee, 51 A. 279, 280 (Ch. 1896)(a claim against the estate of a decedent, on the basis of the decedent's oral promise to pay a claim against her husband's estate, was disallowed because it came within this subsection); and Sabo v. Crooks, 65 N.J. Super. 260, 261-262 (App. Div. 1961)(appeal remanded for inquiry into possible defense under this section to debt incurred by defendant's husband before his death).

<sup>16</sup> See Restatement (Second) of Contracts, sec. 111, which describes agreements of executors and administrators as a subspecies of agreements to be a surety.

<sup>17</sup> Deevy v. Porter, 11 N.J. 594, 595-96 (1953).

<sup>18</sup> Deevy v. Porter, 11 N.J. at 597.

<sup>19</sup> Deevy v. Porter, 11 N.J. at 596-97 (discussing the historical rationale for this subsection and the various criticisms levelled against it); Restatement (Second) of Contracts sec. 130.

<sup>20</sup> Restatement (Second) of Contracts sec. 130.

serves a salutary evidentiary purpose in a generalized way, the poorly-defined outlines of the present subsection may defeat the legitimate expectations of parties to some long-term contracts and may facilitate the repudiation of otherwise legitimate contractual obligations as often as it prevents the assertion of unfounded claims. The Commission believes that the imposition of a writing requirement should be reserved for more clearly-defined classes of contracts and agreements such as those outlined in the retained provisions.

R.S. 25:1-6 - Ratification of Debts Contracted As a Minor

Section 6 of the New Jersey Statute of Frauds provides that "No action shall be maintained to charge any person upon any promise, made after full age, to pay any debt contracted during infancy, to which infancy would be a defense, unless such promise be put in writing and signed by the party to be charged therewith." Simply put, this section provides that a person cannot be sued on a promise made as an adult to pay for a debt incurred as a minor, if minority would have been a defense, unless the promise was in writing and signed by the person making the promise. This section was adopted in 1874,<sup>21</sup> there is no counterpart to it in the original English Statute of Frauds.

The Commission recommends that this section be repealed as it has little continuing importance.<sup>22</sup> This section is concerned only with ratification of debts as to which minority is a defense, a class of debts which have become greatly circumscribed in the course of this century. The age of majority for purposes of contractual capacity has been lowered to 18, R.S. 9:17B-1, and the common law rule that a minor is liable only when contracting for "necessaries" has been interpreted to allow recovery for the sale of a wide variety of goods and services, depending upon the facts of the case.<sup>23</sup> Minors have also been held liable for debts contracted when they misrepresented their age.<sup>24</sup> Moreover, in those cases in which minority is a defense the minor may be required to make restitution for goods and services received.<sup>25</sup> The development of a policy which favors holding minors liable for debts in a wider set of circumstances mitigates against the retention of a special rule governing ratification of a minor's debts.

R.S. 25:1-7 - Promise to Pay a Debt Discharged in Bankruptcy

This section of the New Jersey Statute of Frauds provides that no action may be brought against a person for any promise to pay a debt from which he "was or shall be" discharged under federal bankruptcy law "unless such promise be made after such discharge, and be put in writing and signed by the party to be charged therewith." This section was adopted in 1874, Rev. 1874, p. 299, sec. 8, to change the common law rule that a parol promise by a bankrupt to pay after discharge revived the debt. There was no counterpart of this Section in the original English Statute of Frauds.

---

<sup>21</sup> Rev. 1874 p.229, An Act for the prevention of frauds and perjuries, §7.

<sup>22</sup> Only two cases actually construe this Section of the Statute, West v. Prest, 98 N.J.L. 209 (E. & A. 1922) and Parker v. Hayes, 39 N.J. Eq. 469 (Ch. 1885).

<sup>23</sup> E.g., Bancredit, Inc. v. Bethea, 65 N.J. Super. 538, 549 (App. Div. 1961).

<sup>24</sup> E.g., Manasquan v. Savings and Loan Assn v. Mayer, 98 N.J. Super. 163, 164 (App. Div. 1967); R.J. Georke Co. v. Nicolson, 5 N.J. Super. 412, 416 (App. Div. 1949).

<sup>25</sup> See, e.g., Boyce v. Doyle, 113 N.J. Super. 240 (Law Div. 1971), Pemberton B. & L. Assn v. Adams, 53 N.J. Eq. 258 (Ch. 1895); Carter v. Jays Motors, Inc., 3 N.J. Super. 82 (App. Div. 1949);

The Commission recommends that this section be repealed as it has been preempted by federal bankruptcy law. The present federal law concerning revival of debts discharged in bankruptcy is contained in subsections 524(c) and 524(d) of the Bankruptcy Code.<sup>26</sup> These provisions allow the reaffirmation of discharged debts only with court approval. Such reaffirmations are not effective unless made prior to discharge and the debtor has up to sixty days after the agreement is filed in court to rescind. If the debtor was not represented by an attorney, the court will not enforce a reaffirmation agreement unless the court finds that the agreement is in the debtor's best interest. Because the federal statute affords a bankrupt far greater protection than the New Jersey provision, section 7 of the New Jersey Statute of Frauds is a nullity.

R.S. 25:1-8 - Consideration Not Expressed in Writing

This section was added in 1874, apparently to reverse judicial decisions which had held that the writing required to enforce a promise to be liable for the debt of another under the predecessor to R.S. 25:1-5(b) must contain a statement of the consideration for the promise.<sup>27</sup> The added provision was not limited to promises to be liable for the debt of another, however, but to all sections of the Statute. See Rev. 1874, p. 301, sec. 9. The applicability of the added provision to all required writings under the act rather than only to a writing with respect to liability for the debt of another may have been inadvertent. It was applied to contracts for the sale of land for a time, see Nibert v. Baghurst, 47 N.J. Eq. 201 (Ch. 1890), but later cases on contracts for the sale of land seem to ignore it. E.g. Johnson v. Lambert, 109 N.J. Eq. 88, 90 (E. & A. 1931). The Commission is recommending that this provision not apply to contracts for the sale of land. See proposed section 4 and Comment. The principle of the source section is retained, however, in proposed section 6, the revised version of the source section on promises to be liable for the debt of another.

The Real Estate Broker Provisions of the Statute of Frauds

The provision regulating contracts with real estate brokers is essentially a consumer protection law. The source statute serves to protect the public from "fraud, incompetence, misinterpretation, sharp or unconscionable practice." Ellsworth Dobbs, Inc. v. Johnson, 50 N.J. 528, 553 (1967); Small v. Seldows Stationary, 617 F.2d 992, 996 (3d Cir. 1980). It also discourages agents or brokers from contracting land sales meant to bind owners, unless owners confer written authority. Sadler v. Young, 78 N.J.L. 594, 597 (E. & A. 1910). By preventing overreaching and misunderstanding, the section aids real estate brokers as well as owners. The same reasons that give this provision continued vitality support its extension into broker contracts unrelated to the sale of real estate: contracts with real estate brokers concerning leases and the transfer of other interests in real property and contracts with business brokers.

The Commission recommends retaining and broadening the real estate broker commission provision of the Statute of Frauds and clarifying and simplifying its language.

---

<sup>26</sup> See the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1978, 92 Stat. 2549.

<sup>27</sup> See Restatement (Second) of Contracts sec. 131, comment h and Nibert v. Baghurst, 47 N.J. Eq. 201 (Ch. 1890).

Section 7. Commissions of real estate broker and business broker; writing required

a. (1) Real estate broker is a licensed real estate broker or other person performing the services of a real estate agent or broker.

(2) Business broker is a person who negotiates the purchase or sale of a business. "Negotiates" includes identifies, provides information concerning, or procures an introduction to prospective parties, or assists in the negotiation or consummation of the transaction. Purchase or sale of a business includes the purchase or sale of good will or of the majority of voting interest in a corporation, and of a major part of inventory or fixtures not in the ordinary course of the transferor's business.

b. Except as provided in subsection (d), a real estate broker who acts as agent or broker on behalf of a principal for the conveyance of an interest in real estate, including lease interests for less than 3 years, is entitled to a commission only if before or after the conveyance the authority of the broker is given or recognized in a writing signed by the principal or the principal's authorized agent, and the writing states either the amount or the rate of commission. In this subsection, the interest of a mortgagee or lienor is not an interest in real estate.

c. Except as provided in subsection (d), a business broker is entitled to a commission only if before or after the sale of the business, the authority of the broker is given or recognized in a writing signed by the seller or buyer or authorized agent, and the writing states either the amount or the rate of commission.

d. A broker who acts pursuant to an oral agreement is entitled to a commission only if:

(1) within five days after making the oral agreement and before the conveyance, the broker serves the principal with a written notice which states that its terms are those of the prior agreement including the rate or amount of commission to be paid; and

(2) before the principal serves the broker with a written rejection of the oral agreement, the broker either effects the conveyance or, in good faith, enters negotiations with a prospective party who later effects the conveyance.

e. The notices provided for in this section shall be served either personally, or by registered or certified mail, at the last known address of the person to be served.

Source: R.S. 25:1-9

COMMENT

The proposed section is based on R.S. 25:1-9, with the language adjusted to reflect court interpretations of the source section.

The Commission proposal incorporates judicial constructions in two instances. While the source statute refers only to "a broker or real estate agent," the Court has concluded "that all who sell or exchange real estate for or on account of the owner." are included. O'Connor v. Bd. of Com'rs of West Orange, 39 N.J. Super. 230, 234-235 (Law Div. 1956). Hence the inclusion in subsection (a)(1) of the phrase, "or other person."

In subsection (d)(1), the phrase, "terms are those of the prior agreement" brings the statute in accord with decisional law which requires an explicit indication of an oral agreement as well as inclusion of the oral agreement's terms. Soloff v. Atlantic Coast Bldg. and Loan Assn., 10 N.J. Misc. 1150, 1151-1152 (Sup. Ct. 1932), aff'd, 110 N.J.L. 528 (E. & A. 1933); Fontana v. Polish National Alliance, 130 N.J.L. 503, 509 (E. & A. 1943); Smith v. Cyprus Industrial Minerals Co., 178 N.J. Super. 7, 11 (App. Div. 1981). The courts read the source statute as not requiring use of the word "agreement" in the notice. Myers v. Buff, 45 N.J. Super. 318, 321 (App. Div. 1957). The revised section is compatible with that reading.

The Commission recommends broadening the scope of the statute. The source statute applies only when the broker acts on behalf of an owner-seller of real estate. Tanner Associates, Inc. v. Ciraldo, 33 N.J. 51, 67 (1960). The Commission proposal expands the coverage of the section in two ways. First, the proposed section applies to a broker for either party to any conveyance of an interest in real estate. Both "conveyance" and "interest in real estate" are defined in proposed section 1. As a result of the inclusiveness of the definitions, the proposed section affects contracts with brokers relating to the sale or lease of property as well as to other transactions less directly touching real estate: such as the transfer of interests in a co-operative, or the sale of time shares in property. Unlike the source statute, it applies equally to the transferor and transferee of the interest. The only limitation to the inclusiveness of the proposed statute is the exception for interests of a mortgagee or lienor. The Commission intends to exclude mortgage brokers from the requirements of the statute.

The source statute does not apply to a sale of a business. Bierman v. Liebowitz, 3 N.J. Super. 202, 204 (App. Div. 1949). The Commission proposal, subsection (c) specifically includes these transactions. The same considerations which justify a writing requirement for real estate broker contracts support its extension to business broker contracts. The varying roles of business brokers increases the need for the definition of the relationship in a written document. Since the commission charged by business brokers is often higher than the customary commission of real estate brokers, the importance of unfounded and multiple claims, or of the evasion of just claims, can be great.

The extension of the provision to business brokers requires new definitions in subsection (a)(2). The definitions of "business broker", "negotiates", and "purchase or sale of a business", are based on comparable statutes in Massachusetts (Mass. Ann. Laws ch.259, §7) and New York (N.Y. General Obligations Law §5-701(10)). The inclusion of purchase or sale of "a major part of inventory or fixtures not in the ordinary course of the transferor's business" is derived from the definition of "bulk transfer" in N.J.S. 12A:6-102(1).

TABLE OF DISPOSITIONS

SECTION	DISPOSITION
R.S. 25:1-1	Proposed Sections 1,2,3,4
R.S. 25:1-2	Proposed Sections 1,2,3,4
R.S. 25:1-3	Proposed Sections 1,2,3, 4
R.S. 25:1-4	Proposed Sections 1,2,3,4
R.S. 25:1-5(a)	Proposed Section 6
R.S. 25:1-5(b)	Proposed Section 6
R.S. 25:1-5(c)	Amended
R.S. 25:1-5(d)	Proposed Sections 1,2,3,4
R.S. 25:1-5(e)	Recommended for repeal
R.S. 25:1-6	Recommended for repeal
R.S. 25:1-7	Recommended for repeal
R.S. 25:1-8	Proposed Section 6
R.S. 25:1-9	Proposed Section 7

STATE OF NEW JERSEY
NEW JERSEY LAW REVISION COMMISSION

TENTATIVE REPORT

relating to

Formal Requirements for Real Estate Transactions, Brokerage Agreements and Suretyship Agreements

May 1990

This tentative report is being distributed so that interested persons will be advised of the Commission's tentative recommendations and can make their views known to the Commission. Any comments received will be considered by the Commission in making its final recommendations to the Legislature. The Commission often substantially revises tentative recommendations as a result of the comments it receives.

It is just as important to advise the Commission that you approve of the tentative recommendations as it is to advise the Commission that you believe revisions should be made in the recommendations.

Please send comments concerning this tentative report or direct any related inquiries, to:

John M. Cannel, Esq., Executive Director
NEW JERSEY LAW REVISION COMMISSION
15 Washington Street, Room 1302
Newark, New Jersey 07102
201-648-4575

TENTATIVE REPORT

relating to

Formal Requirements for Real Estate Transactions, Brokerage Agreements and Suretyship Agreements

INTRODUCTION

The New Jersey Statute of Frauds, R.S. 25:1-1 to -9, like similar enactments in every state, derives from the Statute for the Prevention of Frauds and Perjuries passed by Parliament in 1677, 29 Charles II, c.3. The English Statute, totalling 24 individual sections, included provisions that required transfers of land to be in writing, discouraged transfers of land in defraud of judgment creditors, and imposed formalities on oral wills of personal property. The Statute also contained provisions which required certain types of agreements to be in writing in order to be enforceable.

The first five sections of the current New Jersey Statute, R.S. 25:1-1 to -5, derive directly from the English Statute. These five sections are those which require most transactions in land or interests in land to be in writing, and provide that certain enumerated types of agreements must be in writing in order to be enforceable. The language of these sections, taken verbatim from the English Statute in 1794, has been retained virtually intact through several complete revisions of the New Jersey statutes. The remaining four sections of the New Jersey Statute of Frauds were added in the nineteenth century. R.S. 25:1-6 and -7 broadened the substantive scope of the Statute by requiring agreements to pay certain debts to be in writing and R.S. 25:1-8 added a rule of construction applicable to the first seven sections. R.S. 25:1-9 governs in detail the writing required for a real estate broker to be entitled to a commission.

The New Jersey Statute of Frauds is in need of in-depth revision. While the Statute has been revised several times as part of comprehensive recompilation projects in the past, the archaic language and expression of the English original has largely survived, making the first five sections opaque and confusing to read. The Statute has been interpreted in a large body of case law that has so changed the meaning of the Statute as to render the literal language of some sections deceptive. In addition, a good deal of this interpretive case law is conflicting and inconsistent.

In the almost 200 years since the adoption of the Statute of Frauds in this State, as well as in other jurisdictions, both the wisdom and efficacy of some of the provisions of the Statute have been debated extensively. During this same time period, however, the Legislature has seen fit not only to add provisions to the original Statute, but also, particularly in recent years, to add similar provisions in other areas of the statutes.<sup>1</sup> It is appropriate under the circumstances to examine the policy reasons underlying the original provisions and to determine whether, and to what extent, these policy reasons remain valid today.

---

<sup>1</sup> See, e.g., C. 17:16C-21 through -28 (Retail Installment Sales Act requirement that every retail installment contract must be in writing and signed by both buyer and seller); C. 56:8-42 (Health Club Services Act requirement that every health club services contract must be in writing); N.J.S. 12A:8-319 (writing requirement for a contract for the sale of securities) and N.J.S. 12A:1-201 (the Uniform Commercial Code derivative of a section of the original Statute of Frauds). See also R.R. 1:21-7 (writing requirement for attorney contingent fee arrangement).

In entitling this project, the Commission has deliberately avoided the use of the term "Statute of Frauds," by way of underlining the fact that limiting opportunities for fraud is only one policy that may be served by imposing a writing requirement. The Commission identified two additional policy reasons that could support the imposition of a writing requirement in certain types of transactions: Protection of consumers, and protection of the interests of third parties in land transactions. In addition, the Commission considered intensively whether the approach of the existing statute - a preclusive writing requirement - was the best method of achieving the policy goals that were identified, or whether the identified policy goals would be better served by imposing a higher standard of proof on transactions not reduced to writing.

The Commission's approach to each type of transaction covered by the existing statute was to identify the policy considerations that would support the imposition of a writing requirement, and then to determine the nature of the writing requirement, if any, that ought to be imposed. The Commission concluded that in some instances a preclusive rule requiring a writing was unnecessary, and to some extent subversive of the Statute's purpose of combatting fraud. Given the sophistication of modern rules concerning discovery and proof, it is the Commission's view that the imposition of a high standard of proof rather than a preclusive rule would unfetter the courts and allow them to best achieve substantial justice in disputes over the validity of parcel transactions.

As a result of this method of study the Commission's recommendations range from complete elimination of the writing requirement in certain transactions, modification of provisions concerning leases of real estate, trusts in real estate, and contracts for the sale of real estate, substantial retention of the preclusive writing requirement in the case of conveyances of land and surety contracts.

The Land Provisions of the Statute of Frauds

Nowhere are the English origins of the American legal system more apparent than in the law of real property. Both our statutes and judicial decisions on the subject are founded in concepts that were established in England over the five centuries prior to 1776. In particular the codified law of this state still incorporates centuries-old English statutes that establish fundamental property law principles. See, e.g., R.S. 46:3-5 (the Statute Quia Emptores Terrarum) and R.S. 46:3-9 (the Statute of Uses). Another such statute is the New Jersey Statute of Frauds, the first five sections of which, R.S. 25:1-1 to 1-5, are derived from the English Statute of Frauds of 1677. Although frequently regarded merely as a rule of contract law, the New Jersey version of the Statute contains a number of provisions that are concerned with transactions in land. Sections 1 and 2 of the New Jersey statute declare most transactions in land to be void unless they are in writing; sections 3 and 4 require most transactions involving trusts in land to be proved by a writing, and section 5(d) requires contracts for the sale of land to be in writing in order to be enforceable.

Because the writing requirement for land transactions is so fundamental to our present-day conveyancing system, it can be difficult to imagine a time when it was otherwise. In England prior to the Statute of Frauds, however, the transfer of land by ceremony rather than by a writing was still valid. This method of conveyance, livery of seizin, derived from feudal concepts of land holding. While this method was workable when most of the population was illiterate and ownership of land was a matter of common knowledge in the community, in the seventeenth century this type of conveyance had largely been superseded by more modern, written forms of conveyancing and the old forms increasingly were used when a secret conveyance was wanted for illicit purposes. The lawmakers of the day came to recognize that ceremonial conveyances of land facilitated tax evasion and fraudulent transfers of land, and made litigation over title to land more difficult to resolve. The Statute of Frauds changed conveyancing practice in England by expressly eliminating conveyances of land by livery of seizin and by requiring conveyances of land to be in writing. The Statute provided that conveyances of land which were not in writing were "void," and provided that trusts in land were required to be proved by a writing. Requiring conveyances in land to be in writing lessened the opportunity for fraudulent conveyances, tax evasion and disputes over title, and made it possible for grantees to make use of the limited title recordation system which was available at the time. Publicity of land transfers, effectuated by a writing requirement, served a government interest (collection of taxes), a broad public interest (greater security of title generally), and the interests of parties to land transactions (greater reliability in individual transactions).

The Statute of Frauds treatment of executory contracts for the sale of land, as opposed to actual conveyances of land, was less absolute. The Statute of Frauds provided that contracts for the sale of land which were not in writing were merely unenforceable rather than void. Parties were left free to make oral contracts for the sale of land, and to honor their terms, but if one of the parties to an oral contract refused to perform, the oral contract was not enforceable. The provision relating to contracts for the sale of land was one of several types of promises and agreements which were dealt with similarly. These provisions were aimed at reducing the opportunity for fraud which was presented by the civil justice system of the time. The rules relating to admissibility of evidence, among other aspects of the system, facilitated the efforts of individuals who sought to assert false claims based upon breach of contract when in fact no contract had been made. The drafters of the Statute of Frauds addressed this problem by providing that no action could be brought upon certain types of agreements, including contracts for the sale of land, unless the agreement had been reduced to writing.

The framework for conveyancing which was established by the English Statute of Frauds prevailed in New Jersey during colonial times and continued after the Revolution. The Statute of Frauds was one of the first English statutes to be expressly adopted by the New Jersey legislature. See An Act for the prevention of frauds and perjuries, 26th November 1794, Paterson's Laws 133-36 (1800). It is one of the most frequently applied provisions of the New Jersey statutes, and a large body of case law has developed which interprets its provisions.

Over the two centuries since its enactment into law in New Jersey, judicial interpretation has significantly altered the literal terms of the statute. From the earliest times situations presented themselves to the courts in which strict interpretation of the Statute of Frauds land provisions would produce unfair results. Under the general rubric that "the Statute of Frauds should not be used to work a fraud," the courts in New Jersey and elsewhere developed so-called equitable exceptions to the application of the Statute to conveyances, to trusts, and to contracts for the sale of land. Thus, although present conveyances of an interest in land are "void" under the Statute if not in writing, courts have held that a grantor in a parol transaction may be estopped to complain of the lack of a writing in a limited but significant number of circumstances. Contracts for the sale of land are declared unenforceable by section 5(d), but by judicial construction they are enforced in many situations. The source sections concerning trusts in land invalidate parol trusts unless their "creation or declaration" can be "proven" by a writing. Nevertheless, parol trusts are enforced in many situations by the application of the judicially-constructed fictions of resulting trust and constructive trust. As a broad generalization, it can be said that the reason that these Statute of Frauds provisions governing land transactions have been modified so significantly by judicial construction is that their underlying purposes are not always served by strict application of their literal terms.

This revised statute attempts to retain those concepts in the source statute which have continuing validity and to place them in a more logical framework, one which more accurately reflects the changes that have been brought about by 200 years of judicial interpretation and by other changes in the law. This revised statute retains the fundamental distinction embodied in the source statute between a present conveyance in land and an agreement for the sale of land. The conveyance of an interest in land is an actual transfer of an interest and the revised statute continues to require that such a transaction be effectuated by a writing. As was the case in 1677, there is a strong governmental and public interest in the publicity of present transactions in land, and those interests continue to the present day. The recording system, which is the cornerstone of the present-day title security system, depends upon the requirement that transfers of an interest in land be in writing. The revised statute contains a limited exception, however, analogous to the estoppel rule developed under the source statute; under certain circumstances, the grantor who enters into an oral transaction may not take advantage of the rule that an unwritten conveyance is void.

A new approach for agreements to convey an interest in real estate is offered by the revised statute. The source statute was drafted in a time prior to the development of modern evidence law. The drafters hoped to discourage perjury in litigation over parol agreements by imposing an absolute prohibition on enforcing an unwritten agreement. This absolute approach was abandoned early in the life of the statute as it became apparent that an absolute prohibition created as much injustice as it prevented. In the case of parol agreements for the sale of land, the development of equitable exceptions to unenforceability mitigated the injustices resulting from absolute unenforceability, but the development of the exceptions has been inconsistent and confusing. The approach of the revised statute is to permit proof of parol agreements. The standard for enforceability is not tied to ancient equity law but to modern evidence law. A parol agreement is considered enforceable between the parties to the agreement if it can be proved by clear and convincing evidence.

A new approach is also offered for trusts in real estate. Under the source statute trusts in real estate were covered by source sections 3 and 4, which expressed rules that combined the concepts of voidability and unenforceability. The judicial interpretation of the source sections resulted in a body of law that has managed to achieve fair results only through the application of the convoluted legal fictions of resulting trust and constructive trust. In this revised statute, a trust in land is treated as a present transfer of an interest which may be coupled with an agreement to transfer an interest or to hold it in trust. This statute treats these aspects of a trust according to the same rules applicable to other present conveyances and other agreements to convey, respectively. The result in most cases will be identical to that under the source statute, but the analysis will be more straightforward.

Section 1 - Definitions:

a. An interest in real estate is any right, title or estate in real estate, and it includes a lien on real estate and an interest in a trust in real estate. For purposes of this chapter it does not include a lease.

b. The conveyance of an interest in real estate is any transaction that changes the legal or beneficial ownership of an interest in real estate, including the creation or extinguishment of an interest. The transfer of an interest in real estate does not include a transfer by operation of law.

c. A transfer by operation of law is a transfer that is deemed to take place upon the occurrence of an event, including a transfer that is deemed to take place by virtue of the laws governing intestate succession, or a transfer that takes place as a result of a judicial proceeding.

d. A trust in real estate is created:

(1) by a conveyance of the beneficial ownership of an interest in real estate by the owner of the interest to another person; or

(2) by a conveyance of the legal ownership of an interest in real estate to a grantee, coupled with an agreement by the grantee either to hold the legal ownership for the benefit of the grantor or another person or to convey the legal ownership to the grantor or another person.

e. A lease is the sale of the possession and use of land for a term.

Source: R.S. 25:1-1, 25:1-2, 25:1-3, 25:1-4, 25:1-5(d)

COMMENT

"Interest in real estate." This definition is taken from Orrok v. Parmigiani, 32 N.J. Super. 70 (App. Div. 1954). The court construed section 5(d) of the source statute, the provision concerning contracts for sale of "an interest in land" to include contracts for the sale of "any right, title, or estate in, or lien on, real estate," while excluding from that term "agreements which, though affecting lands, do not contemplate the transfer of any title, ownership or possession." 32 N.J. Super. at 75. Note, however, that leases are expressly excluded from this definition and are separately defined under subsection (e). See the discussion below as to the rationale for treating leases separately.

This definition of "an interest in real estate" is intended to incorporate case law construing the source statute, with the express exception of leases. Section 1 of the source statute has been held to apply to the conveyance of full title to land, Mayberry v. Johnson, 15 N.J.L. 116, 119 (Sup. Ct. 1835), and it has been held to apply as well to the creation of a life estate, Thomas v. Thomas, 20 N. J. Misc. 419 (Ch. 1942), a lien, Nixon v. Nixon, 100 N.J. Eq. 437 (Ch. 1928), an easement, Sergli v. Carew, 18 N.J. Super. 307 (Ch. 1952), and a servitude, Droutman v. E.M. & L. Garage, 129

N.J. Eq. (E. & A. 1941). See also Forbes v. Forbes, 137 N.J. Eq. 520 (E. & A. 1946), in which the Court of Errors and Appeals held that a parol license may be granted but a license by its nature is merely a revocable permission which may be withdrawn at any time. Source section 1 has been applied to transactions that are by gift or by purchase. Aiello v. Knoll Golf Club, 64 N.J. Super. 156 (App. Div. 1960).

Source section 5(d), the provision concerning contracts for the sale of an interest in land, has been held to apply to contracts to convey full title, e.g., Bernstein v. Rosenzweig, 1 N.J. Super. 48 (App. Div. 1948), and it has been held to require a writing for an agreement authorizing the removal of sand, Brehen v. O'Donnell, 36 N.J.L. 257 (Sup. Ct. 1873), or the removal of timber, Slocum v. Seymour, 36 N.J.L. 138, 13 Am. Rep. 432 (Sup. Ct. 1873), an agreement to allow the construction of buildings on land, Smith v. Smith's Administrators, 28 N.J.L. 208, 78 Am. Dec. 49 (Sup. Ct. 1860), an agreement to partition land, e.g., Woodhull v. Longstreet, 18 N.J.L. 405 (Sup. Ct. 1841); Lloyd v. Conover, 25 N.J.L. 47 (Sup. Ct. 1855), an agreement to make a mortgage on realty, Feldman v. Warshawsky, 125 N.J. Eq. 19 (E. & A. 1938), or to release a mortgage, Jos. S. Naame Co. v. Louis Satanov Real Estate & Mortgage Corp., 103 N.J. Eq. 386 (Ch. 1928), aff'd 109 N.J. Eq. 165 (E. & A. 1929), an agreement to devise land, e.g., Lozier v. Hill, 68 N.J. Eq. 300 (Ch. 1904); Klockner v. Green, 54 N.J. 230 (1969), an agreement to purchase a share in a cooperative apartment, Presten v. Sailer, 225 N.J. Super. 178 (App. Div. 1988), an option to purchase real estate, Sutton v. Lienau, 225 N.J. Super. 293, 299 (App. Div. 1988), and an agreement to sell a business which includes land, where the agreement is entire and indivisible, Kufta v. Hughson, 46 N.J. Super. 222, 231 (Ch. Div. 1957).

"Conveyance of an interest in real estate." This term is very broadly defined as "any change in the legal or beneficial ownership of an interest in real estate," with the exclusion of transfers by operation of law, which is separately defined. Although the terms "conveyance" and "transfer" are virtually identical, see Feldman v. Urban Commercial, Inc., 64 N.J. Super. 364 (Ch. Div. 1960), the term conveyance is used in this subsection because it connotes, albeit slightly, a voluntary transaction. See Restatement of Property sec. 13.

"Transfer by operation of law." The term "by act or operation of law" was interpreted very broadly under the source statutes, especially with regard to trusts. This definition is intended to have somewhat narrower and more specific application than the source term, to include only those transfers which are deemed by express principles of law to take place by virtue of the occurrence of an event. For example, upon the death of an intestate, the legal heirs become owners of the intestate's property, N.J.S. 3B:1-3, even though further action may be necessary for the heirs to obtain written evidence of their ownership, e.g., the issuance of a deed transferring title to real property by the administrator of the intestate's estate. N.J.S. 3B:23-5. Similarly, the doctrine of adverse possession may effect a change in the ownership of property upon the expiration of the statutory period of adverse possession. See N.J.S. 2A:14-5 and -6 and, e.g., Braue v. Fleck, 23 N.J. 1 (1956).

"A trust in real estate." This definition treats trusts in real estate as having the aspects of both a present conveyance of an interest and, in most cases, an agreement either to convey the interest or to hold it for the benefit of another. For example, a trust may be created by a property owner's declaration that he holds the property in trust for another person. Under present law such a declaration operates as a present conveyance of an interest in real estate, i.e., the conveyance of the beneficial interest in the property to another person, while the property owner retains the legal interest as trustee for the other person. Under proposed section 2, such a declaration will not operate to transfer an interest in the property unless it is in writing.

A conveyance by the owner to another person who is to hold the property as a trustee entails both a present conveyance (the conveyance of the legal title to the trustee) and an agreement by the trustee, either to hold the property for the benefit of another or to reconvey it.

Under proposed section 2 the conveyance of the legal title to the trustee must be in writing in order to be valid. In addition, under proposed section 4 the trustee's agreement to hold the property for the benefit of another or to reconvey is an agreement that must either be in writing or must be proved by "clear and convincing evidence."

This definition is included in order to indicate that insofar as a trust in real estate operates as either as a present conveyance or an agreement to convey it must satisfy the requirements imposed by this section on other transactions of the same type. It is also intended to make parol trusts in real estate enforceable according to their terms if they can be proved by clear and convincing evidence. This change is intended to eliminate the necessity for the application of the doctrines of resulting trust and constructive trust in cases involving parol express trusts. Thus, for example, if a grantor transfers legal title to real estate to a trustee pursuant to an oral agreement that the trustee will reconvey the legal title to the beneficiary of the trust, either the grantor or the beneficiary can enforce the agreement according to its terms if the agreement to reconvey can be proved by clear and convincing evidence. Enforcing the agreement according to its terms means that either the grantor or the beneficiary can compel the trustee to reconvey legal title to the beneficiary. Under prior law the a parol express trust would not be enforced according to its terms but only through the application of the theories of resulting or constructive trust, the result of which in most cases was a reconveyance of the property to the grantor rather than to the beneficiary. See, e.g., Moses v. Moses, 140 N.J. Eq. 575 (E. & A. 1947).

"Lease." This term is excluded from the definition of an "interest in real estate" in subsection (a) in order to facilitate the treatment of leases in a separate section. The definition here is derived from Thiokol Chemical Corp. v. Morris County Board of Taxation, 41 N.J. 405 (1964). Although a lease has traditionally been considered to be an estate in land, recent cases have struggled with the fact that in the modern context many leases are more in the nature of a contract than a conveyance of an estate in land. See, e.g., Somer v. Kridel, 74 N.J. 446 (1977); Ringwood Associates, Ltd. v. Jack's of Route 23, 155 N.J. Super. 294 (Law. Div. 1977). Leases are defined separately here, and are treated separately under section 3 of this proposed statute, in recognition of their hybrid aspect under modern law.

Section 2 - Writing requirement, conveyances of an interest in real estate

a. A valid conveyance of an interest in real estate shall be in a writing signed by the grantor or the grantor's agent, or by a person authorized by law to execute the writing. The writing shall identify the grantor and grantee and the nature of the interest being conveyed.

b. The conveyance of an interest in real estate which is not valid under subsection a. is valid between the grantor of the interest and the grantee if:

(1) the grantor has placed the grantee in possession of the interest in real estate as a result of the conveyance; and

(2) the grantee has either paid all or part of the consideration for the conveyance or has reasonably relied on the validity of the conveyance to the grantee's detriment.

Source: R.S. 25:1-1, 25:1-2

COMMENT

This section combines the rules of source sections 1 and 2, and applies to conveyances of an interest in real estate. Subsection (a) states the general rule that no interest in land is conveyed by virtue of a parol transaction. Read together with the definitions in proposed section 1, this section makes transactions in real estate or interests in real estate inoperative unless they are in writing, and sets three minimum requirements for a sufficient writing: it must identify the grantor and the grantee and the nature of the interest being conveyed, and it must be signed. Note that other applicable principles of law may require that a writing contain more than merely the minimum specified in this section. For example, a deed signed by the grantor of property but not acknowledged would satisfy the requirements of this section but would not satisfy the requirements of the Recording Statute, R.S. 46:15-1.

"Signed by the grantor or the grantor's agent, or by a person authorized by law to execute the writing." This provision changes the rule of source section 1, which required that if the writing was signed by an agent, the agent's authority had to be in writing as well. A writing is sufficient under this section if it is signed by the grantor or by the grantor's agent, or by a person authorized by law to execute the writing. Good practice as well as the requirements of lenders, title insurance companies and grantees may continue to demand that an agent's authority to execute a conveyance be reduced to writing, but it will not be required to satisfy this statute. Questions concerning the validity and extent of a particular agent's authority will be dealt with under otherwise applicable law. See also proposed section 4, which also provides for signature by an agent of an agreement for the conveyance of an interest in real estate.

Subsection (b) of this section incorporates judicial interpretations of the source statute to the effect that, in some cases, the owner of an interest in real estate who conveys the interest in a parol transaction may not take advantage of the rule of subsection (a) that such a conveyance is invalid. This is a very limited exception, applying only in those situations in which the grantor has placed the grantee in possession as a result of the invalid conveyance and the grantee has either paid consideration for the purchase or has detrimentally relied upon the validity of the conveyance. Example: Ann sells a house to Ben for $50,000 in a parol transaction, Ben pays the $50,000 and moves into the house. Ann is not permitted to assert that the parol transaction was invalid in an action by Ben to quiet title. The same principle applies to gift transactions. Example: Ann gives Ben a house, and he moves in and makes improvements. Not only does the parol transaction result in a completed gift under the law of gifts, but Ben may bring an action to quiet title and Ann may not assert that the parol transaction is invalid under this section in that action. Note that purchase transactions and gift transactions differ significantly, however, in that in a purchase transaction there is either implicitly or explicitly an agreement to convey underlying the actual conveyance. The grantor in a parol purchase transaction which does not satisfy the exception provided in subsection (b) of this section may be able to enforce the agreement under proposed section 4 if the agreement and its terms can be proved by clear and convincing evidence.

Section 3 - Writing requirement, leases

a. A valid lease of real estate for more than three years shall be in a writing signed by the lessor or the lessor's agent, or by a person authorized by law to execute the writing. The writing shall identify the lessor and the lessee, the property being leased, the term of the lease and other essential terms.

b. A lease of real estate for more than three years which is not valid under subsection a. of this section is enforceable between the lessor and the lessee if the identity of the lessor and the lessee, the property being leased, the term of the lease and other essential terms are proved by clear and convincing evidence.

Source: R.S. 25:1-1, 25:1-5(d)

COMMENT

Section 1 of the source statute expressly included leases, and a lease has historically been considered to be an estate in land. In recent years, however, courts have struggled with the fact that modern leases, both residential and commercial, often have more of the characteristics of a contractual agreement than a conveyance of an estate. See, e.g., Sommer v. Kridel, 74 N.J. 446 (1977); Ringwood Associates, Ltc., v. Jack's of Route 23, 153 N.J. Super. 294 (Law Div. 1977). In the context of imposing a writing requirement, the hybrid nature of a lease becomes problematic as well. This problem is reflected in the cases decided under the source statute. In one nineteenth century case the court treated an unsigned lease as an executory contract where the lessee had taken possession, and granted the lessor damages for breach of the lease under the equitable doctrine of part performance. Wharton v. Stoutenburgh, 35 N.J. Eq. 266 (E. & A. 1882). An early twentieth century case refused to use a contractual analysis, however, and held that an unsigned lease for more than three years, under which the lessee had taken possession, paid rent, and made improvements, would not be enforced on contract principles. Clement v. Young-McShea, 69 N.J. Eq. 347 (Ch. 1905). Two recent cases have taken opposite points of view on the treatment of parol leases for more than three years. In Brechman v. Admar, 182 N.J. Super. 259 (Ch. Div. 1981) the court refused to enforce a lease for five years where there was a signed writing that did not satisfy the writing requirement of source section 1 because it did not include the commencement date or term of the lease. The court refused to allow testimony to prove those terms, and also refused to enforce the lease on part performance grounds because the acts taken by the lessee (payment of a deposit, hiring an architect, preparation of blueprints) were considered to be merely preparatory and not in performance of the lease. In Deutsch v. Budget Rent-A-Car, 213 N.J. Super. 385 (App. Div. 1986) the court enforced a partly-performed oral lease for more than three years where the lessee had taken possession and made substantial improvements. The court stated that part performance of the lease was relevant if the acts of part performance "provide a reliable indication that the parties have made an agreement of the general nature sought to be enforced."

The approach of this separate section on leases is to continue to treat a lease as a conveyance of an estate in land in that a writing is required in order to make a lease that is valid as to third parties. This principle supports the policy of the recording statutes, as does the parallel provision in section 2 of the proposed statute, which continues the writing requirement for a valid conveyance of any other interest in land. Subsection (b) of this section, however, treats a lease as a contract as between the lessor and the lessee. Thus, an oral lease for six years may be considered invalid under subsection (a), but it may be enforceable between the lessor and the lessee if the terms can be proved by clear and convincing evidence.

It is the Commission's view that in the context of determining whether a parol lease should be enforceable between the parties, possession by the lessee is only one factor which may be considered. Possession by a lessee is certainly probative of the existence of a lessor-lessee relationship, but it is likely to be ambiguous as to the length of the lease as well as to other lease terms. As a result, the Commission decided not to impose any single preclusive requirement such as possession for enforceability of a parol lease. See the parallel provision on enforcement of agreements, Section 4, which also rejects preclusive requirements for enforceability.

Section 3(b) authorizes enforcement of a parol lease between the parties to it if the material terms are proved by clear and convincing evidence. Commissioner Rosen favors an additional requirement - i.e., that the lessor has placed the lessee in possession - for the following reasons. First, cases which enforce parol leases cited above all involve fact situations in which the tenant had, in fact, been placed in possession of the premises. Second, in Commissioner Rosen's view, adding a requirement of possession would make the rule for leases consistent with that for conveyances in Section 2.

Section 4 - Enforceability of agreements regarding real estate

An otherwise valid agreement for the conveyance of an interest in real estate, to hold an interest in real estate for the benefit of another, or to make a lease of real estate, is enforceable if the essential terms of the agreement are:

- a. established by a writing signed by the person against whom enforcement of the agreement is sought or by that person's agent, or by a person authorized by law to execute the writing; or
- b. proved by clear and convincing evidence.

Source: R.S. 25:1-3, 25:1-4, 25:1-5(d)

COMMENT

This section significantly changes the statutory rule applicable to the enforcement of parol agreements involving real estate. It reflects the approach of Deutsch v. Budget Rent-A-Car, 213 N.J. Super. 385 (App. Div. 1986), in which the Appellate Division treated the part performance of a parol lease as evidence of the parties' agreement that the lease was for more than three years. The court commented that the doctrine of part performance should be applied to enforce a parol agreement "if part performance provides a reliable indication that the parties have made an agreement of the general nature sought to be enforced." See also Iacono v. Toll Brothers, 225 N.J. Super. 87 (App. Div. 1988), certif. denied, 113 N.J. 329 (1988)(unsigned contract for the sale of land enforceable in the absence of acts of part performance, where the purchaser detrimentally relied on the validity of the contract).

It is the Commission's view that a preclusive list of specific requirements for the enforceability of agreements relating to land, such as the traditional requirements of part performance or detrimental reliance, unnecessarily limits the courts in determining whether a parol agreement should be enforced. The history of the interpretation of the Statute of Frauds shows, especially in recent years, that courts have had to struggle to fit individual cases into the traditional categories of preclusive requirements in order to achieve just results. Under the clear and convincing evidence standard both the traditional factors as well as other probative facts may be considered in determining enforceability.

The traditional rule applied in New Jersey cases to the enforceability of parol contracts for the sale of land was grounded in equitable principles applicable to enforcement of land contracts generally. The proponent of a contract was required to prove the terms of an underlying agreement; it was frequently stated that this proof was required to be clear and convincing. Proof of the agreement itself was not enough, however. The person seeking specific performance of a parol contract typically was required to show that the contract had been partly performed, either by the taking of possession, or the payment of all or part of the purchase price, or both. The traditional rule has been eroded in cases in which it was apparent that the rule would produce unjust results.

Justification for adopting an evidentiary rule for the enforceability of parol agreements for the conveyance of land may be found in the ancient history of the Statute of Frauds. The seventeenth century drafters of the statute were concerned with the false claims of contractual liability, claims which were difficult for defendants to refute under the evidentiary and other procedural rules applicable at the time. Requiring contracts to be in writing was a "bright line" that was reasonable under the circumstances of that time. The rules of procedure and evidence of today's court system are better able to cope with claims founded on perjured testimony, reducing the need for a bright line test of enforceability.

Agreement to hold an interest in real estate for the benefit of another. This section applies to an agreement to convey an interest in real estate as well as to an agreement to hold an interest in real estate for the benefit of another. Agreements to hold for the benefit of another are included in order to make parol trusts directly enforceable according to their terms. See discussion in Comment to proposed section 1.

Agreement to make a lease. An agreement to make a lease is enforceable according to the same rule applicable to contracts for the conveyance of an interest in real estate. Because a lease is expressly excluded from the definition of an interest in land under section 1(a), it is necessary to include agreements to make a lease expressly in this section. See also proposed section 3 which governs leases.

"Otherwise valid." This phrase is included in order to make it clear that this section is not intended to displace other applicable principles such as lack of consideration, mistake, lack of capacity, etc. Thus, for example, a contract for the sale of land which is obtained by duress is not enforceable under this section merely because its essential terms are in a writing which satisfies subsection (a) or can be proven under subsection (b). It should also be understood that it is implicit in this section that the proponent of an agreement be able to prove that there is in fact an agreement between the parties.

"Essential terms of the agreement." What constitutes the essential terms of an agreement will vary according to the nature of the transaction. See, e.g., Miller v. Headley, 109 N.J. Eq. 436 (Ch. 1932), aff'd, 112 N.J. Eq. 89 (E. & A. 1932); Bernstein v. Rosenzweig, 1 N.J. Super. 48 (App. Div. 1948).

Consideration. Whether the consideration need be included in the writing is unclear under present law. R.S. 25:1-8, which was not part of the original Statute of Frauds but was added in 1874, states a general rule that "the consideration of any promise, contract or agreement required to be put in writing by sections 25:1-1 to 25:1-7 of this title, need not be set forth or expressed in such writing, but may be proved by any other legal evidence." This would appear to provide that an agreement for the sale of an interest in land need not include the purchase price, but case law does not bear out this interpretation consistently. Compare Nibert v. Baghurst, 47 N.J. Eq. 201 (Ch. 1890) ("Since [the adoption of this section in 1874] it is not necessary that the consideration of a contract, coming within the statute, should be set out in the memorandum") with Johnson v. Lambert, 109 N.J. Eq. 88, 90 (E. & A. 1931) ("It is well settled that the memorandum in writing of a contract for sale of lands must contain the full terms of the contract--that is, the names of the buyer and seller, the subject of the sale, the price, the terms of credit, and the conditions of sale, if any there be."). In this section the phrase "essential terms of the agreement" is left for judicial interpretation on a case-by-case basis. In any event, under subsection 4(b), the consideration may be proved by "clear and convincing evidence." See proposed section 5, which retains the rule that the consideration need not be stated in the writing in the case of promises to be liable for the debt of another. See also the comment to proposed section 5.

Commissioner Rosen believes that an agreement for the conveyance of an interest in real estate, to hold an interest in real estate for the benefit of another, or to make a lease should not be enforceable solely because the agreement can be proved by clear and convincing evidence. In Commissioner Rosen's view, the cases cited above require also that there be present either part performance or detrimental reliance. These are additional and - in his view - essential equitable principles that justify departure from the requirement of a writing. To enforce parol agreements to convey, hold or lease real estate without compelling equitable circumstances, in Commissioner Rosen's opinion, would be contrary to the reasonable expectations of participants in real estate transactions and would encourage perjury in litigation.

The Contracts Provisions of the Statute of Frauds

Section 4 of the English Statute of Frauds is one of a number of sections of the original statute that were concerned particularly with suppressing perjury.<sup>2</sup> That section, now section 5 of the New Jersey Statute, provided that "no action may be brought" upon any of five enumerated types of agreements unless the agreement was in writing or there was a written note or memorandum of it. The enumerated types of agreements were those by an executor or administrator of an estate to pay damages out of his own estate, agreements to answer for the debt of another, agreements made upon consideration of marriage, agreements for the sale of an interest in land (discussed above), and agreements not to be performed within a year from their making.

Although it is generally agreed that section 4 of the English statute was intended to suppress perjury,<sup>3</sup> this bare statement of purpose is not helpful in understanding why these particular categories of agreements were singled out for special treatment. With respect to promises of executors and administrators, it has been theorized these promises were included because it was much more common for such a promise to be made, and to be important, in the seventeenth century. Executors and administrators benefitted personally from estates, and there was little compulsion for them to make distributions from an estate. The wide discretion which they enjoyed, coupled with limitations upon the kinds of claims that could legally be made against an estate, made it more likely that an executor or administrator would make, or be claimed to have made, a personal promise to satisfy a claim.<sup>4</sup>

Contracts of suretyship and contracts not to be performed within a year may have been included because they were continuing contracts, which made them more susceptible to the defects in the judicial system of the time, and contracts for the sale of an interest in land, as well as contracts in consideration of marriage, which commonly involved the transfer of real property interests, were included as corollaries to the separate sections on interests in land.<sup>5</sup>

Given the lack of explanatory legislative history it is impossible to say whether specific policy choices motivated the adoption of the New Jersey version

---

<sup>2</sup> Another provision of the English Statute which was concerned with suppressing perjury was section 17, which provided that no contract for the sale of goods of a value of more than ten pounds would be valid unless in writing or evidenced by a writing. Section 17 is the predecessor to Section 2-201 of the Uniform Commercial Code, R.S. 12A:2-201, which is outside of the scope of this project.

<sup>3</sup> 6 W. Holdsworth, A History of English Law 379-93 (2d ed. reprinted 1977); accord Teeven, Seventeenth Century Evidentiary Concerns and the Statute of Frauds, 9 Adelaide L. Rev. 252 (1983). Holdsworth theorizes that the concern of the drafters with suppressing perjury arose out of the fact that rules of procedure and evidence were in transition at the time the Statute was adopted. Reaction to the defects in the jury system of the time had given rise to restrictions on the admission of certain kinds of testimony. In particular, the parties to an action frequently were not permitted to testify, leaving defendants unable to refute claims supported by perjured testimony. The approach of the Statute was to require certain types of transactions to be capable of proof only by a writing, to preclude wrongdoers from being able to prosecute a manufactured claim on the basis of perjured testimony alone.

<sup>4</sup> Holdsworth, supra at 390-93.

<sup>5</sup> Holdsworth, supra at 390-93.

of the Statute of Frauds in 1794. It is more likely that the adoption of the Statute was part of the ongoing attempt during that formative period to replicate generally many of the aspects of the English legal system that were considered important. Moreover, it is difficult to say whether the same kinds of evidentiary problems affected litigation involving these kinds of claims in local courts of the time. What is clear is that concern with the assertion of unfounded claims based on oral agreements continued into the nineteenth century. This concern is evidenced by the virtually simultaneous addition of three entirely new provisions to the Statute of Frauds within a two-year period. All three sections paralleled section 4 of the English Statute in that they made certain kinds of promises unenforceable unless in writing. The first provision, enacted in 1873, concerned promises to pay a debt discharged in bankruptcy. Both of the other sections were enacted as part of the 1874 revision. These sections imposed a writing requirement on promises to pay debts contracted during infancy, and on real estate broker contracts. The provisions on real estate broker contracts, section 9 of the present statute, will be dealt with separately below. See proposed section 6 and comment.

Developments in law and in social policy have changed the context in which these provisions now operate, and each provision must be reconsidered individually in light of past experience and present circumstances. Modern commentators have identified three purposes, summarized in the Restatement (Second) of Contracts, which writing requirements may serve with respect to contracts, agreements and promises: an evidentiary purpose of providing "reliable evidence of the existence and terms of the contract"; a cautionary purpose of discouraging precipitous or "ill-considered" action; and a channeling function which "has helped to create a climate in which parties often regard their agreements as tentative until there is a signed writing." Restatement (Second) of Contracts, Statutory Note 281, 286.

Sections recommended for revision and retention:

R.S. 25:1-5(b) - Promise to Answer for the Debt of Another

Subsection 5(b) of the New Jersey Statute of Frauds provides that "A special promise to answer for the debt, default or miscarriage of another person" must be in writing in order to be enforceable. In a recent case involving a claim by a creditor that an officer of an insolvent corporation had agreed to be liable for the corporation's debt, the court commented that it was the fear of fabricated oral assurances in this type of situation which led to the inclusion of this subsection in the Statute.<sup>6</sup> The Restatement (Second) of Contracts adds that this subsection serves a "cautionary function of guarding the promisor against ill-considered action."<sup>7</sup>

The Commission recommends that this provision of the Statute be retained. It applies to a relatively narrow, definable class of promises which result in a person assuming responsibility for the underlying obligation of another. Because this type of promise is one in which by definition no consideration moves to the promisor, the cautionary and channeling functions of a writing requirement are particularly applicable. In some contexts, it also has an important consumer protection function.

---

<sup>6</sup> Van Dam Egg Co. v. Allendale Farms, Inc., 199 N.J. Super. 452, 458-459 (App.Div. 1985).

<sup>7</sup> Restatement (Second) of Contracts sec. 112.

Section 5 - Liability for the obligation of another.

A promise to be liable for the obligation of another person, in order to be enforceable, shall be in a writing signed by the person assuming the liability or by that person's agent. The consideration for the promise need not be stated in the writing.

Source: R.S. 25:1-5(a), 25:1-5(b), 25:1-8

COMMENT

Purpose of the provision. Like source section R.S. 25:1-5(b), this proposed section has an evidentiary purpose, Van Dam Egg Co. v. Allendale Farms, Inc., 199 N.J. Super. 452, 458-459 (App.Div. 1985)(the source section discourages fabricated claims); a cautionary purpose, Restatement (Second) of Contracts, Statutory Note at 281, 286 ("guarding the promisor against ill-considered action") and a channeling function. Id. ("it has helped create a climate in which parties often regard their agreements as tentative until there is a signed writing.")

Obligation of another. The main issue upon which cases under this subsection turn is whether there is a "principal obligation 'of another' than the promisor. The promisor must promise as a surety for the principal obligor" in order for the promise to be within the Statute. Restatement (Second) of Contracts sec. 112, at 293. This provisions does not apply to a promise which amounts to a separate undertaking which involves new consideration and is largely for the promisor's personal benefit. Restatement (Second) of Contracts sec. 112, at 293; Schoor Associates v. Holmdel Heights Construction Co., 68 N.J. 95, 106 (1975).

An early statement of the general rule concerning the types of promises that fall within the Statute's writing requirement is that such promises are collateral, they secondarily obligate the promisor, and they lack new consideration. Thus, where two persons promised to sign a note to pay a third person's debt, where no new consideration moved to them, the promise to sign the note was unenforceable. Wills v. Shinn, 42 N.J.L. 138, 140 (Sup. Ct. 1880). Within this general rule, courts have developed various tests to determine the applicability of the Statute. In the most recent New Jersey Supreme Court opinion on this subject the court discussed the various tests and applied the "leading object or main purpose rule":

When the leading object of the promise or agreement is to become guarantor or surety to the promisee for a debt for which a third party is and continues to be primarily liable, the agreement, whether made before or after or at the time with the promise of the principal, is within the statute, and not binding unless evidenced by writing. On the other hand, when the leading object of the promisor is to subserve some interest or purpose of his own, notwithstanding the effect is to pay or discharge the debt of another, his promise is not within the statute.

Schoor Associates v. Holmdel Heights Construction Co., 68 N.J. 95, 106 (1975). In adopting this rule, the court considered and rejected a number of other tests that have been applied by courts or supported by commentators, including the credit test and the surety test "supported by Professor Williston and others." Id. at 104.

Novations. Because the promise must be one to be a surety, the statute does not apply to novations. See Emerson N.Y. - N.J., Inc. v. Brookwood T.V., 122 N.J. Super. 288, 295 (Law Div. 1973) where the court defined a novation as a transaction "whereby one person promises to assume the debt of another in consideration that the original debtor be discharged therefrom, and the creditor substitutes the promisor in place of the original debtor and extinguishes his debt." In order for a novation to be accomplished, "The discharge of the debtor must be full and complete, operating as an extinguishment of the debt at the time the new promise is made, and as a consideration therefor; but an agreement whereby one guarantor or surety is substituted for another is not within the statute of frauds, although the obligation of the original debtor is not extinguished." 122 N.J. Super. at 295.

Releases. This subsection does not apply to releases. Emerson v. N.Y. - N.J., Inc. v. Brookwood T.V., 122 N.J. Super. 288, 293 (Law Div. 1973). The court commented that "The statute applies to a special promise to answer for the debt, default or miscarriage of another person' (N.J.S.A. 25:1-5(b)) but it is silent concerning a release from such a promise. Therefore, although a writing may have been required for the guaranty originally, a release from that obligation could be accomplished orally, notwithstanding the statute of frauds."

Executors and administrators. The Commission is recommending repeal of subsection 5(a) of the present statute, R.S. 25:1-5(c) (see discussion below), which requires a writing to enforce the promise of an executor or administrator to be liable for the debt of an estate. Such promises, to the extent that they constitute promises to be liable for the obligation of another, will fall under this proposed section.

Consideration. The provision that the consideration for a promise falling under this section need not be stated in the writing is taken from R.S. 25:1-8. See further discussion of the history of that provision below.

R.S. 25:1-5(c) - Agreements Made Upon Consideration of Marriage

Subsection 5(c) requires a writing to enforce a contract made upon consideration of marriage, that is, a promise in which part or all of the consideration is marriage or a promise to marry. The basic principle of this subsection, that agreements made in consideration of marriage must be in writing in order to be enforceable, has been litigated through the years in factually diverse situations.<sup>8</sup> This subsection has been held not to bar the enforcement of parol agreements between unmarried couples, because the consideration in such cases is not marriage but services rendered in return for promises of future support.<sup>9</sup>

---

<sup>8</sup> The statute has been held to bar actions on parol promises made in consideration of marriage by a wife who agreed to apply her assets to expenses of her future husband and herself if he would marry her at an early date, Alexander v. Alexander, 96 N.J. Eq. 10, 14 (Ch. 1924); by a prospective spouse to adopt the other spouse's child, Elmer v. Wellbrook, 110 N.J. Eq. 15, 18 (Ch. 1932); by a husband to convey his dwelling to his wife after marriage, Herr v. Herr, 13 N.J. 79, 87 (1953); by a husband to give his prospective bride a home and a housekeeper, Gilbert v. Gilbert, 66 N.J. Super. 246, 251-252 (App. Div. 1961); by a wife in consideration that her husband's mother would come from Hungary and live with them, Koch v. Koch, 95 N.J. Super. 546, 550 (App. Div. 1967). This subsection barred a wife from claiming a death benefit from the husband's employer on the basis of a parol antenuptial agreement, where the husband's niece was a properly-named beneficiary. Pennsylvania Railroad Co. v. Warren, 69 N.J. Eq. 706, 709 (Ch. 1905), and also barred a wife from varying the terms of her husband's will by parol testimony of an antenuptial agreement. Russell v. Russell, 60 N.J. Eq. 282 (Ch. 1900), aff'd, 63 N.J. Eq. 282 (E. & A. 1901).

<sup>9</sup> Kozlowski v. Kozlowski, 164 N.J. Super. 162, 177 (Ch. Div. 1978), aff'd, 80 N.J. 378 (1979); Crowe v. Degoia, 203 N.J. Super. 22, 34 (App. Div. 1985), aff'd, 102 N.J. 50 (1986).

This category of agreements may have been included in the English Statute because they typically involved transfers of real property interests and thus requiring a writing was consistent with the conveyancing and other land sections.<sup>10</sup> In the modern context this provision serves the evidentiary, cautionary and channeling purposes identified as supporting the imposition of a writing requirement.<sup>11</sup>

The Uniform Premarital Agreement Act, C. 37:2-31 to -41, supersedes this subsection with respect to premarital agreements executed on and after its effective date. In addition to imposing a writing requirement on premarital agreements, the Uniform Act imposes additional formal requirements and substantive limitations as well. Subsection 5(c) will continue to be applicable, however, to premarital agreements entered into prior to the effective date of the Uniform Act, and therefore it will be of importance for many years to come. The Commission therefore recommends that subsection 5(c) of the present statute be retained as part of the codified law, and amended to clearly reflect the fact that it has been prospectively superseded by the Uniform Act.

R.S. 25:1-5. Promises or agreements not binding unless in writing

No action shall be brought upon any of the following agreements or promises, unless the agreement or promise, upon which such action shall be brought or some memorandum or note thereof, shall be in writing, and signed by the party to be charged therewith, or by some other person thereunto by him lawfully authorized:

[a. A special promise of an executor or administrator to answer damages out of his own estate;

b. A special promise to answer for the debt, default or miscarriage of another person;]

c. An agreement made upon consideration of marriage entered into prior to the effective date of the Uniform Premarital Agreement Act, P.L.1988, c.99;

d. A contract or sale of real estate, or any interest in or concerning the same; or

e. An agreement that is not to be performed within one year from the making thereof].<sup>12</sup>

Sections to be repealed:

<sup>10</sup> W. Holdsworth, supra, at 392.

<sup>11</sup> See Manning v. Riley, 52 N.J. Eq. 39 (Ch. 1893) ("The purpose of the statute is ... to render hasty and inconsiderate oral promises, made to induce marriage, without legal force, and thus to give protection against the consequences of rashness and folly.").

<sup>12</sup> The amended statute would then read:

"No action shall be brought upon any of the following agreements or promises, unless the agreement or promise, upon which such action shall be brought or some memorandum or note thereof, shall be in writing, and signed by the party to be charged therewith, or by some other person thereunto by him lawfully authorized:

c. An agreement made upon consideration of marriage entered into prior to the effective date of the Uniform Premarital Agreement Act, P.L.1988, c.99."

R.S. 25:1-5(a) Promise of an executor or administrator

Subsection 5(a) of the present New Jersey Statute of Frauds requires a writing to enforce an agreement of an executor or administrator to be personally liable for damages. The Commission recommends that this subsection be repealed. Unlike the situation which obtained in the seventeenth century, the responsibilities of fiduciaries to satisfy the claims of creditors and other claimants, and the manner in which those claims are to be satisfied, are covered in detail in the Probate Code.<sup>13</sup> Under present circumstances this subsection is an anomaly in that it treats separately one class of fiduciaries, while promises by other kinds of fiduciaries to be personally liable for debts are covered under subsection 5(b).<sup>14</sup>

The Commission believes that a separate section for this class of fiduciaries is unnecessary,<sup>15</sup> and that agreements by executors and administrators to be personally liable for the obligations of an estate should be treated under proposed section 5, set forth above, as a subspecies of agreements to be liable for the obligation of another.<sup>16</sup>

R.S. 25:1-5(e) - Contracts Not to be Performed Within One Year of Their Making

Subsection 5(e) of the New Jersey Statute of Frauds provides that "[a]n agreement that is not to be performed within one year from the making thereof" must be in writing in order to be enforceable. It has been theorized that this provision was included in the English Statute because, like the provision concerning surety agreements, it is a type of continuing contract which by its nature is more susceptible to the problems of proof which existed in the court system of the time. In Deevy v. Porter, decided by the Supreme Court in 1953, the court in a case involving this subsection commented of the Statute generally that "[i]t was intended to guard against the perils of perjury and error in the spoken word ... and to protect defendants against unfounded and fraudulent claims."<sup>17</sup> The court also referred to an early opinion of an English court which described the policy of the statute as being to prevent "the leaving to memory the terms of a contract for longer time than a year."<sup>18</sup>

Both courts and secondary authorities have commented that the peculiar language chosen by the drafters of the Statute has not served their purpose well

<sup>13</sup> See, e.g., Title 3B, chapter 22 (payment and proof of claims).

<sup>14</sup> See Remington v. Lauter Piano Co., 8 N.J. Misc. 257 (Sup. Ct. 1930)(attorney for trustee liable to pay broker's commission on oral promise because promise was independent undertaking not within Subsection 5(b)); Gallagher v. McBride, 66 N.J.L. 360 (Sup. Ct. 1901)(guardian liable for supplies delivered to ward notwithstanding subsection 5(b) because debt was incurred directly by guardian).

<sup>15</sup> Only two cases were found which apply this subsection. Cochrane v. McEntee, 51 A. 279, 280 (Ch. 1896)(a claim against the estate of a decedent, on the basis of the decedent's oral promise to pay a claim against her husband's estate, was disallowed because it came within this subsection); and Sabo v. Crooks, 65 N.J. Super. 260, 261-262 (App. Div. 1961)(appeal remanded for inquiry into possible defense under this section to debt incurred by defendant's husband before his death).

<sup>16</sup> See Restatement (Second) of Contracts, sec. 111, which describes agreements of executors and administrators as a subspecies of agreements to be a surety.

<sup>17</sup> Deevy v. Porter, 11 N.J. 594, 595-96 (1953).

<sup>18</sup> Deevy v. Porter, 11 N.J. at 597.

because many long-term contracts or continuing contracts have been held to fall outside the Statute.<sup>19</sup> The Restatement Second of Contracts suggests that the inutility of the chosen language has led to a tendency to construe this subsection narrowly.<sup>20</sup>

The Commission recommends that this subsection be repealed as its language prescribes an arbitrary and illogical class that includes only some long-term contracts. While requiring a writing in the case of long-term contracts serves a salutary evidentiary purpose in a generalized way, the poorly-defined outlines of the present subsection may defeat the legitimate expectations of parties to some long-term contracts and may facilitate the repudiation of otherwise legitimate contractual obligations as often as it prevents the assertion of unfounded claims. The Commission believes that the imposition of a writing requirement should be reserved for more clearly-defined classes of contracts and agreements such as those outlined in the retained provisions.

R.S. 25:1-6 - Ratification of Debts Contracted As a Minor

Section 6 of the New Jersey Statute of Frauds provides that "No action shall be maintained to charge any person upon any promise, made after full age, to pay any debt contracted during infancy, to which infancy would be a defense, unless such promise be put in writing and signed by the party to be charged therewith." Simply put, this section provides that a person cannot be sued on a promise made as an adult to pay for a debt incurred as a minor, if minority would have been a defense, unless the promise was in writing and signed by the person making the promise. This section was adopted in 1874;<sup>21</sup> there is no counterpart to it in the original English Statute of Frauds.

The Commission recommends that this section be repealed as it has little continuing importance.<sup>22</sup> This section is concerned only with ratification of debts as to which minority is a defense, a class of debts which have become greatly circumscribed in the course of this century. The age of majority for purposes of contractual capacity has been lowered to 18, R.S. 9:17B-1, and the common law rule that a minor is liable only when contracting for "necessaries" has been interpreted to allow recovery for the sale of a wide variety of goods and services, depending upon the facts of the case.<sup>23</sup> Minors have also been held liable for debts contracted when they misrepresented their age.<sup>24</sup> Moreover, in those cases in which minority is a defense the minor may be required to make restitution for goods and services received.<sup>25</sup> The development of a policy which favors holding minors liable for debts in a wider set of circumstances mitigates against the retention of a special rule governing ratification of a minor's debts.

<sup>19</sup> Deevy v. Porter, 11 N.J. at 596-97 (discussing the historical rationale for this subsection and the various criticisms levelled against it); Restatement (Second) of Contracts sec. 130.

<sup>20</sup> Restatement (Second) of Contracts sec. 130.

<sup>21</sup> Rev. 1874 p.229, An Act for the prevention of frauds and perjuries, §7.

<sup>22</sup> Only two cases actually construe this Section of the Statute, West v. Prest, 98 N.J.L. 209 (E. & A. 1922) and Parker v. Hayes, 39 N.J. Eq. 469 (Ch. 1885).

<sup>23</sup> E.g., Bancredit, Inc. v. Bethea, 65 N.J. Super. 538, 549 (App. Div. 1961).

<sup>24</sup> E.g., Manasquan v. Savings and Loan Assn v. Mayer, 98 N.J. Super. 163, 164 (App. Div. 1967); R.J. Georke Co. v. Nicolson, 5 N.J. Super. 412, 416 (App. Div. 1949).

<sup>25</sup> See, e.g., Boyce v. Doyle, 113 N.J. Super. 240 (Law Div. 1971), Pemberton B. & L. Assn v. Adams, 53 N.J. Eq. 258 (Ch. 1895); Carter v. Jays Motors, Inc., 3 N.J. Super. 82 (App. Div. 1949);

R.S. 25:1-7 - Promise to Pay a Debt Discharged in Bankruptcy

This section of the New Jersey Statute of Frauds provides that no action may be brought against a person for any promise to pay a debt from which he "was or shall be" discharged under federal bankruptcy law "unless such promise be made after such discharge, and be put in writing and signed by the party to be charged therewith." This section was adopted in 1874, Rev. 1874, p. 299, sec. 8, to change the common law rule that a parol promise by a bankrupt to pay after discharge revived the debt. There was no counterpart of this Section in the original English Statute of Frauds.

The Commission recommends that this section be repealed as it has been preempted by federal bankruptcy law. The present federal law concerning revival of debts discharged in bankruptcy is contained in subsections 524(c) and 524(d) of the Bankruptcy Code.<sup>26</sup> These provisions allow the reaffirmation of discharged debts only with court approval. Such reaffirmations are not effective unless made prior to discharge and the debtor has up to sixty days after the agreement is filed in court to rescind. If the debtor was not represented by an attorney, the court will not enforce a reaffirmation agreement unless the court finds that the agreement is in the debtor's best interest. Because the federal statute affords a bankrupt far greater protection than the New Jersey provision, section 7 of the New Jersey Statute of Frauds is a nullity.

R.S. 25:1-8 - Consideration Not Expressed in Writing

This section was added in 1874, apparently to reverse judicial decisions which had held that the writing required to enforce a promise to be liable for the debt of another under the predecessor to R.S. 25:1-5(b) must contain a statement of the consideration for the promise.<sup>27</sup> The added provision was not limited to promises to be liable for the debt of another, however, but applied to all sections of the Statute. See Rev. 1874, p. 301, sec. 9. The applicability of the added provision to all required writings under the act rather than only to a writing with respect to liability for the debt of another may have been inadvertent. It was applied to contracts for the sale of land for a time, see Nibert v. Baghurst, 47 N.J. Eq. 201 (Ch. 1890), but later cases on contracts for the sale of land seem to ignore it. E.g. Johnson v. Lambert, 109 N.J. Eq. 88, 90 (E. & A. 1931). The Commission is recommending that this provision not apply to contracts for the sale of land, leaving to judicial interpretation on a case-by-case basis the decision whether the consideration for a contract for the sale of land need be included in a writing as an "essential term" of the contract. See proposed section 4 and Comment. The principle of the source section is retained, however, in proposed section 5, the revised version of the source section on promises to be liable for the debt of another.

The Real Estate Broker Provisions of the Statute of Frauds

The provision regulating contracts with real estate brokers is essentially a consumer protection law. The source statute serves to protect the public from

<sup>26</sup> See the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1978, 92 Stat. 2549.

<sup>27</sup> See Restatement (Second) of Contracts sec. 131, comment h and Nibert v. Baghurst, 47 N.J. Eq. 201 (Ch. 1890).

"fraud, incompetence, misinterpretation, sharp or unconscionable practice." Ellsworth Dobbs, Inc. v. Johnson, 50 N.J. 528, 553 (1967); Small v. Seldows Stationary, 617 F.2d 992, 996 (3d Cir. 1980). It also discourages agents or brokers from contracting land sales meant to bind owners, unless owners confer written authority. Sadler v. Young, 78 N.J.L. 594, 597 (E. & A. 1910). By preventing overreaching and misunderstanding, the section aids real estate brokers as well as owners. The same reasons that give this provision continued vitality support its extension into broker contracts unrelated to the sale of real estate: contracts with real estate brokers concerning leases and the transfer of other interests in real property and contracts with business brokers.

The Commission recommends retaining and broadening the real estate broker commission provision of the Statute of Frauds and clarifying and simplifying its language.

Section 6. Commissions of real estate broker and business broker; writing required

a. (1) Real estate broker is a licensed real estate broker or other person performing the services of a real estate agent or broker.

(2) Business broker is a person who negotiates the purchase or sale of a business. "Negotiates" includes identifies, provides information concerning, or procures an introduction to prospective parties, or assists in the negotiation or consummation of the transaction. Purchase or sale of a business includes the purchase or sale of good will or of the majority of voting interest in a corporation, and of a major part of inventory or fixtures not in the ordinary course of the transferor's business.

b. Except as provided in subsection (d), a real estate broker who acts as agent or broker on behalf of a principal for the conveyance of an interest in real estate, including lease interests for less than 3 years, is entitled to a commission only if before or after the conveyance the authority of the broker is given or recognized in a writing signed by the principal or the principal's authorized agent, and the writing states either the amount or the rate of commission. In this subsection, the interest of a mortgagee or lienor is not an interest in real estate.

c. Except as provided in subsection (d), a business broker is entitled to a commission only if before or after the sale of the business, the authority of the broker is given or recognized in a writing signed by the seller or buyer or authorized agent, and the writing states either the amount or the rate of commission.

d. A broker who acts pursuant to an oral agreement is entitled to a commission only if:

(1) within five days after making the oral agreement and before the conveyance, the broker serves the principal with a written notice which states that its terms are those of the prior agreement including the rate or amount of commission to be paid; and

(2) before the principal serves the broker with a written rejection of the oral agreement, the broker either effects the conveyance or, in good faith, enters negotiations with a prospective party who later effects the conveyance.

e. The notices provided for in this section shall be served either personally, or by registered or certified mail, at the last known address of the person to be served.

Source: R.S. 25:1-9

COMMENT

The proposed section is based on R.S. 25:1-9, with the language adjusted to reflect court interpretations of the source section.

The Commission proposal incorporates judicial constructions in two instances. While the source statute refers only to "a broker or real estate agent," the Court has concluded "that all who sell or exchange real estate for or on account of the owner." are included. O'Connor v. Bd. of Com'rs of West Orange, 39 N.J. Super. 230, 234-235 (Law Div. 1956). Hence the inclusion in subsection (a)(1) of the phrase, "or other person."

In subsection (d)(1), the phrase, "terms are those of the prior agreement" brings the statute in accord with decisional law which requires an explicit indication of an oral agreement as well as inclusion of the oral agreement's terms. Soloff v. Atlantic Coast Bldg. and Loan Assn., 10 N.J. Misc. 1150, 1151-1152 (Sup. Ct. 1932), aff'd, 110 N.J.L. 528 (E. & A. 1933); Fontana v. Polish National Alliance, 130 N.J.L. 503, 509 (E. & A. 1943); Smith v. Cyprus Industrial Minerals Co., 178 N.J. Super. 7, 11 (App. Div. 1981). The courts read the source statute as not requiring use of the word "agreement" in the notice. Myers v. Buff, 45 N.J. Super. 318, 321 (App. Div. 1957). The revised section is compatible with that reading.

The Commission recommends broadening the scope of the statute. The source statute applies only when the broker acts on behalf of an owner-seller of real estate. Tanner Associates, Inc. v. Ciraldo, 33 N.J. 51, 67 (1960). The Commission proposal expands the coverage of the section in two ways. First, the proposed section applies to a broker for either party to any conveyance of an interest in real estate. Both "conveyance" and "interest in real estate" are defined in proposed section 1. As a result of the inclusiveness of the definitions, the proposed section affects contracts with brokers relating to the sale or lease of property as well as to other transactions less directly touching real estate: such as the transfer of interests in a co-operative, or the sale of time shares in property. Unlike the source statute, it applies equally to the transferor and transferee of the interest. The only limitation to the inclusiveness of the proposed statute is the exception for interests of a mortgagee or lienor. The Commission intends to exclude mortgage brokers from the requirements of the statute.

The source statute does not apply to a sale of a business. Bierman v. Liebowitz, 3 N.J. Super. 202, 204 (App. Div. 1949). The Commission proposal, subsection (c) specifically includes these transactions. The same considerations which justify a writing requirement for real estate broker contracts support its extension to business broker contracts. The varying roles of business brokers increases the need for the definition of the relationship in a written document. Since the commission charged by business brokers is often higher than the customary commission of real estate brokers, the importance of unfounded and multiple claims, or of the evasion of just claims, can be great.

The extension of the provision to business brokers requires new definitions in subsection (a)(2). The definitions of "business broker", "negotiates", and "purchase or sale of a business", are based on comparable statutes in Massachusetts (Mass. Ann. Laws ch.259, §7) and New York (N.Y. General Obligations Law §5-701(10)). The inclusion of purchase or sale of "a major part of inventory or fixtures not in the ordinary course of the transferor's business" is derived from the definition of "bulk transfer" in N.J.S. 12A:6-102(1).

TABLE OF DISPOSITIONS

SECTION	DISPOSITION
R.S. 25:1-1	Proposed Sections 1,2,3
R.S. 25:1-2	Proposed Sections 1,2,3
R.S. 25:1-3	Proposed Sections 1,2,3, 4
R.S. 25:1-4	Proposed Sections 1,2,3,4
R.S. 25:1-5(a)	Proposed Section 5
R.S. 25:1-5(b)	Proposed Section 5
R.S. 25:1-5(c)	Amended
R.S. 25:1-5(d)	Proposed Sections 1,4
R.S. 25:1-5(e)	Deleted
R.S. 25:1-6	Deleted
R.S. 25:1-7	Deleted
R.S. 25:1-8	See Proposed Section 5
R.S. 25:1-9	Proposed Section 6

STATE OF NEW JERSEY
NEW JERSEY LAW REVISION COMMISSION

SECOND TENTATIVE REPORT

relating to

Writing Requirements for Real Estate Transactions,
Brokerage Agreements and Suretyship Agreements

January 1991

This Tentative Report is being distributed so that interested persons will be advised of the Commission's tentative recommendations and can make their views known to the Commission. Any comments received will be considered by the Commission in making its final recommendations to the Legislature. The Commission often substantially revises tentative recommendations as a result of the comments it receives. This Second Tentative Report has incorporated many of the comments received in response to the first Tentative Report distributed in May 1990.

It is just as important to advise the Commission that you approve of the tentative recommendations as it is to advise the Commission that you believe revisions should be made in the recommendations.

Please send comments concerning this Tentative Report or direct any related inquiries, to:

John M. Cannel, Esq., Executive Director
NEW JERSEY LAW REVISION COMMISSION
15 Washington Street, Room 1302
Newark, New Jersey 07102
201-648-4575

SECOND TENTATIVE REPORT

INTRODUCTION

The New Jersey Statute of Frauds, R.S. 25:1-1 to -9, like similar enactments in every state, derives from the Statute for the Prevention of Frauds and Perjuries passed by Parliament in 1677, 29 Charles II, c.3. The English Statute, totalling 24 individual sections, included provisions that required transfers of land to be in writing, discouraged transfers of land in defraud of judgment creditors, and imposed formalities on oral wills of personal property. The Statute also contained provisions which required certain types of agreements to be in writing in order to be enforceable.

The first five sections of the current New Jersey Statute, R.S. 25:1-1 to -5, derive directly from the English Statute. These five sections are those which require most transactions in land or interests in land to be in writing, and provide that certain enumerated types of agreements must be in writing in order to be enforceable. The language of these sections, taken verbatim from the English Statute in 1794, has been retained virtually intact through several complete revisions of the New Jersey statutes. The remaining four sections of the New Jersey Statute of Frauds were added in the nineteenth century. R.S. 25:1-6 and -7 broadened the substantive scope of the Statute by requiring agreements to pay certain debts to be in writing and R.S. 25:1-8 added a rule of construction applicable to the first seven sections. R.S. 25:1-9 governs in detail the writing required for a real estate broker to be entitled to a commission.

The New Jersey Statute of Frauds is in need of in-depth revision. While the Statute has been revised several times as part of comprehensive recompilation projects in the past, the archaic language and expression of the English original has largely survived, making the first five sections opaque and confusing to read. The Statute has been interpreted in a large body of case law that has so changed the meaning of the Statute as to render the literal language of some sections deceptive. In addition, a good deal of this interpretive case law is conflicting and inconsistent.

In the almost 200 years since the adoption of the Statute of Frauds in this State, as well as in other jurisdictions, both the wisdom and efficacy of some of the provisions of the Statute have been debated extensively. During this same time period, however, the Legislature has seen fit not only to add provisions to the original Statute, but also, particularly in recent years, to add similar provisions in other areas of the statutes.<sup>1</sup> It is appropriate under the circumstances to examine the policy reasons underlying the original provisions and to determine whether, and to what extent, these policy reasons remain valid today.

---

<sup>1</sup> See, e.g., C. 17:16C-21 through -28 (Retail Installment Sales Act requirement that every retail installment contract must be in writing and signed by both buyer and seller); C. 56:8-42 (Health Club Services Act requirement that every health club services contract must be in writing); N.J.S. 12A:8-319 (writing requirement for a contract for the sale of securities) and N.J.S. 12A:1-201 (the Uniform Commercial Code derivative of a section of the original Statute of Frauds). See also R.R. 1:21-7 (writing requirement for attorney contingent fee arrangement).

In entitling this project, the Commission has deliberately avoided the use of the term "Statute of Frauds," by way of underlining the fact that limiting opportunities for fraud is only one policy that may be served by imposing a writing requirement. The Commission identified two additional policy reasons that could support the imposition of a writing requirement in certain types of transactions: Protection of consumers, and protection of the interests of third parties in land transactions. In addition, the Commission considered intensively whether the approach of the existing statute - a preclusive writing requirement - was the best method of achieving the policy goals that were identified, or whether the identified policy goals would be better served by imposing a higher standard of proof on transactions not reduced to writing.

The Commission's approach to each type of transaction covered by the existing statute was to identify the policy considerations that would support the imposition of a writing requirement, and then to determine the nature of the writing requirement, if any, that ought to be imposed. The Commission concluded that in some instances a preclusive rule requiring a writing was unnecessary, and to some extent subversive of the Statute's purpose of combatting fraud. Given the sophistication of modern rules concerning discovery and proof, it is the Commission's view that the imposition of a high standard of proof rather than a preclusive rule would unfetter the courts and allow them to best achieve substantial justice in disputes over the validity of parcel transactions.

As a result of this method of study the Commission's recommendations range from complete elimination of the writing requirement in certain transactions, modification of provisions concerning leases of real estate, trusts in real estate, and contracts for the sale of real estate, and substantial retention of the preclusive writing requirement in the case of conveyances of land and surety contracts.

The Land Provisions of the Statute of Frauds

Nowhere are the English origins of the American legal system more apparent than in the law of real property. Both our statutes and judicial decisions on the subject are founded in concepts that were established in England over the five centuries prior to 1776. In particular the codified law of this state still incorporates centuries-old English statutes that establish fundamental property law principles. See, e.g., R.S. 46:3-5 (the Statute Quia Emptores Terrarum) and R.S. 46:3-9 (the Statute of Uses). Another such statute is the New Jersey Statute of Frauds, the first five sections of which, R.S. 25:1-1 to 1-5, are derived from the English Statute of Frauds of 1677. Although frequently regarded merely as a rule of contract law, the New Jersey version of the Statute contains a number of provisions that are concerned with transactions in land. Sections 1 and 2 of the New Jersey statute declare most transactions in land to be void unless they are in writing; sections 3 and 4 require most transactions involving trusts in land to be proved by a writing, and section 5(d) requires contracts for the sale of land to be in writing in order to be enforceable.

Because the writing requirement for land transactions is so fundamental to our present-day conveyancing system, it can be difficult to imagine a time when it was otherwise. In England prior to the Statute of Frauds, however, the transfer of land by ceremony rather than by a writing was still valid. This method of conveyance, livery of seizin, derived from feudal concepts of land holding. While this method was workable when most of the population was illiterate and ownership of land was a matter of common knowledge in the community, in the seventeenth century this type of conveyance had largely been superseded by more modern, written forms of conveyancing and the old forms increasingly were used when a secret conveyance was wanted for illicit purposes. The lawmakers of the day came to recognize that ceremonial conveyances of land facilitated tax evasion and fraudulent transfers of land, and made litigation over title to land more difficult to resolve. The Statute of Frauds changed conveyancing practice in England by expressly eliminating conveyances of land by livery of seizin and by requiring conveyances of land to be in writing. The Statute provided that conveyances of land which were not in writing were "void," and provided that trusts in land were required to be proved by a writing. Requiring conveyances in land to be in writing lessened the opportunity for fraudulent conveyances, tax evasion and disputes over title, and made it possible for grantees to make use of the limited title recordation system which was available at the time. Publicity of land transfers, effectuated by a writing requirement, served a government interest (collection of taxes), a broad public interest (greater security of title generally), and the interests of parties to land transactions (greater reliability in individual transactions).

The Statute of Frauds treatment of executory contracts for the sale of land, as opposed to actual conveyances of land, was less absolute. The Statute of Frauds provided that contracts for the sale of land which were not in writing were merely unenforceable rather than void. Parties were left free to make oral contracts for the sale of land, and to honor their terms, but if one of the parties to an oral contract refused to perform, the oral contract was not enforceable. The provision relating to contracts for the sale of land was one of several types of promises and agreements which were dealt with similarly. These provisions were aimed at reducing the opportunity for fraud which was presented by the civil justice system of the time. The rules relating to admissibility of evidence, among other aspects of the system, facilitated the efforts of individuals who sought to assert false claims based upon breach of contract when in fact no contract had been made. The drafters of the Statute of Frauds addressed this problem by providing that no action could be brought upon certain types of agreements, including contracts for the sale of land, unless the agreement had been reduced to writing.

The framework for conveyancing which was established by the English Statute of Frauds prevailed in New Jersey during colonial times and continued after the Revolution. The Statute of Frauds was one of the first English statutes to be expressly adopted by the New Jersey legislature. See An Act for the prevention of frauds and perjuries, 26th November 1794, Paterson's Laws 133-36 (1800). It is one of the most frequently applied provisions of the New Jersey statutes, and a large body of case law has developed which interprets its provisions.

Over the two centuries since its enactment into law in New Jersey, judicial interpretation has significantly altered the literal terms of the statute. From the earliest times situations presented themselves to the courts in which strict interpretation of the Statute of Frauds land provisions would produce unfair results. Under the general rubric that "the Statute of Frauds should not be used to work a fraud," the courts in New Jersey and elsewhere developed so-called equitable exceptions to the application of the Statute to conveyances, to trusts, and to contracts for the sale of land. Thus, although present conveyances of an interest in land are "void" under the Statute if not in writing, courts have held that a grantor in a parol transaction may be estopped to complain of the lack of a writing in a limited but significant number of circumstances. Contracts for the sale of land are declared unenforceable by section 5(d), but by judicial construction they are enforced in many situations. The source sections concerning trusts in land invalidate parol trusts unless their "creation or declaration" can be "proven" by a writing. Nevertheless, parol trusts are enforced in many situations by the application of the judicially-constructed fictions of resulting trust and constructive trust. As a broad generalization, it can be said that the reason that these Statute of Frauds provisions governing land transactions have been modified so significantly by judicial construction is that their underlying purposes are not always served by strict application of their literal terms.

This revised statute attempts to retain those concepts in the source statute which have continuing validity and to place them in a more logical framework, one which more accurately reflects the changes that have been brought about by 200 years of judicial interpretation and by other changes in the law. This revised statute retains the fundamental distinction embodied in the source statute between a present conveyance in land and an agreement for the sale of land. The conveyance of an interest in land is an actual transfer of an interest and the revised statute continues to require that such a transaction be effectuated by a writing. As was the case in 1677, there is a strong governmental and public interest in the publicity of present transactions in land, and those interests continue to the present day. The recording system, which is the cornerstone of the present-day title security system, depends upon the requirement that transfers of an interest in land be in writing. The revised statute contains a limited exception, however, analogous to the estoppel rule developed under the source statute; under certain circumstances, the grantor who enters into an oral transaction may not take advantage of the rule that an unwritten conveyance is void.

A new approach for agreements to convey an interest in real estate is offered by the revised statute. The source statute was drafted in a time prior to the development of modern evidence law. The drafters hoped to discourage perjury in litigation over parol agreements by imposing an absolute prohibition on enforcing an unwritten agreement. This absolute approach was abandoned early in the life of the statute as it became apparent that an absolute prohibition created as much injustice as it prevented. In the case of parol agreements for the sale of land, the development of equitable exceptions to unenforceability mitigated the injustices resulting from absolute unenforceability, but the development of the exceptions has been inconsistent and confusing. The approach of the revised statute is to permit proof of parol agreements. The standard for enforceability is not tied to ancient equity law but to modern evidence law. A parol agreement is considered enforceable between the parties to the agreement if it can be proved by clear and convincing evidence.

A new approach is also offered for trusts in real estate. Under the source statute trusts in real estate were covered by source sections 3 and 4, which expressed rules that combined the concepts of voidability and unenforceability. The judicial interpretation of the source sections resulted in a body of law that has managed to achieve fair results only through the application of the convoluted legal fictions of resulting trust and constructive trust. In this revised statute, a trust in land is treated as a present transfer of an interest which may be coupled with an agreement to transfer an interest or to hold it in trust. This statute treats these aspects of a trust according to the same rules applicable to other present conveyances and other agreements to convey, respectively. The result in most cases will be identical to that under the source statute, but the analysis will be more straightforward.

Section 1 - Definitions

a. An interest in real estate is any right, title or estate in real estate. It includes a lien on real estate, a servitude, and an interest in a trust in real estate.

b. A transaction involving an interest in real estate is the sale, gift, creation or extinguishment of an interest in real estate.

Source: R.S. 25:1-1, 25:1-2, 25:1-3, 25:1-4, 25:1-5(d)

COMMENT

Interest in real estate. This definition is derived from Orrok v. Parmigiani, 32 N.J. Super. 70 (App. Div. 1954), in which the court construed section 5(d) of the source statute, the provision concerning contracts for sale of "an interest in land" to include contracts for the sale of "any right, title, or estate in, or lien on, real estate," while excluding from that term "agreements which, though affecting lands, do not contemplate the transfer of any title, ownership or possession." 32 N.J. Super. at 75. Section 1 of the source statute has been held to apply to the conveyance of full title to land, Mayberry v. Johnson, 15 N.J.L. 116, 119 (Sup. Ct. 1835), and it has been held to apply as well to the creation of a life estate, Thomas v. Thomas, 20 N. J. Misc. 419 (Ch. 1942), a lien, Nixon v. Nixon, 100 N.J. Eq. 437 (Ch. 1928), an easement, Sergli v. Carew, 18 N.J. Super. 307 (Ch. 1952), and a servitude, Droutman v. E.M. & L. Garage, 129 N.J. Eq. (E. & A. 1941). This definition does not include a license. See Forbes v. Forbes, 137 N.J. Eq. 520 (E. & A. 1946), in which the Court of Errors and Appeals held that a parol license may be granted but a license by its nature is merely a revocable permission which may be withdrawn at any time.

Interest in a trust in real estate. An interest in a trust in real estate is expressly included in the definition of an interest in real estate. Under the source statutes, trusts in real estate were treated in two separate sections, which facilitated the development of convoluted and confusing rules concerning the enforceability of parol trusts. For example, a parol trust was considered invalid, but a later, written "declaration" of the trust was considered to relate back to the creation of the trust by parol and render the trust valid as against the judgment creditors and heirs of the grantor. See, e.g., Coles v. Osback, 13 N.J. Super. 367, 371 (Ch. Div. 1951), rev'd on application of facts, 22 N.J. Super. 358 (App. Div. 1952). In the proposed statute, the reference to an interest in a trust in real estate in the definition of an interest in real estate is included in order to change the existing rule, to make clear that insofar as a trust in real estate involves the creation or extinguishment of an interest in real estate it must satisfy the requirements imposed by section 2 of the proposed statute on all transactions involving an interest in real estate. Thus, the creation of a parol trust is not effective to transfer ownership of an interest in land. It may, however, be enforceable under section 4 of the proposed statute. Section 4 provides that an agreement to transfer an interest in real estate or to hold an interest in real estate for the benefit of another must either be in writing, or must be proved by clear and convincing evidence, in order to be enforceable. This section is intended to make parol trusts in real estate enforceable according to their terms if they can be proved by clear and convincing evidence. This change is intended to eliminate the necessity for the application of the doctrines of resulting trust and constructive trust in cases involving parol express trusts. See, e.g., Moses v. Moses, 140 N.J. Eq. 575 (E. & A. 1947). Thus, for example, if a grantor transfers legal title to real estate to a trustee subject to an oral agreement that the trustee will reconvey the legal title to the beneficiary of the trust, either the grantor or the beneficiary can enforce the agreement according to its terms if the agreement to reconvey can be proved by clear and convincing evidence under proposed section 4. Enforcing the agreement according to its terms means that either the grantor or the beneficiary can compel the trustee to reconvey to legal title to the beneficiary. One peculiarity of the prior law was that in such circumstances the property would be reconveyed to the grantor, not to the beneficiary.

Transactions involving an interest in real estate. Source section 5(d), the provision concerning contracts for the sale of an interest in land, has been held to apply to contracts to convey full title, e.g., Bernstein v. Rosenzweig, 1 N.J. Super. 48 (App. Div. 1948), and it has been held to require a writing for an agreement authorizing the removal of sand, Brehan v. O'Donnell, 36 N.J.L. 257 (Sup. Ct. 1873), or the removal of timber; Slocum v. Seymour, 36 N.J.L. 138, 13 Am. Rep. 432 (Sup. Ct. 1873), an agreement to allow the construction of buildings on land; Smith v. Smith's Administrators, 28 N.J.L. 208, 78 Am. Dec. 49 (Sup. Ct. 1860), an agreement to partition land, e.g., Woodhull v. Longstreet, 18 N.J.L. 405 (Sup. Ct. 1841); Lloyd v. Conover, 25 N.J.L. 47 (Sup. Ct. 1855), an agreement to make a mortgage on realty, Feldman v. Warshawsky, 125 N.J. Eq. 19 (E. & A. 1938), or to release a mortgage, Jos. S. Naame Co. v. Louis Satanov Real Estate & Mortgage Corp., 103 N.J. Eq. 386 (Ch. 1928), aff'd 109 N.J. Eq. 165 (E. & A. 1929), an agreement to devise land, e.g., Lozier v. Hill, 68 N.J. Eq. 300 (Ch. 1904); Klockner v. Green, 54 N.J. 230 (1969), an agreement to purchase a share in a cooperative apartment, Presten v. Sailer, 225 N.J. Super. 178 (App. Div. 1988), an option to purchase real estate, Sutton v. Lienau, 225 N.J. Super. 293, 299 (App. Div. 1988), and an agreement to sell a business which includes land, where the agreement is entire and indivisible, Kufta v. Hughson, 46 N.J. Super. 222, 231 (Ch. Div. 1957).

Gift Transaction. Source section 1 has been applied to gift transactions as well as to sale transactions. Aiello v. Knoll Golf Club, 64 N.J. Super. 156 (App. Div. 1960).

Section 2 - Writing requirement, conveyances of an interest in real estate

a. A transaction involving an interest in real estate is not effective to transfer ownership of an interest in real estate unless:

(1) the real estate, the nature of the interest, the fact of the transfer and the identity of the transferor and the transferee are established in a writing signed by the transferor, by the transferor's agent, or by a person authorized by law to sign the writing; or

(2) the transferor has placed the transferee in possession of the real estate as a result of the transaction and the transferee has either paid all or part of the consideration for the transfer or has reasonably relied on the effectiveness of the transfer to the transferee's detriment.

b. A transaction which does not satisfy the requirements of this section is not enforceable except as an agreement to transfer an interest in real estate under section 4 of this Act.

c. This section does not apply to leases.

Source: R.S. 25:1-1, 25:1-2

COMMENT

This section combines the rules of source sections 1 and 2, and applies to all manner of transactions involving an interest in real estate (other than leases, which are dealt with in a separate section): the sale of a fee interest in real estate, the creation of a trust in real estate, a gift of an interest in real estate, and the extinguishment of any interest in real estate. Subsection (a) states the general rule that no transfer of ownership occurs in a parol transaction. Transactions involving an interest in real estate are ineffective to transfer ownership unless they are in a writing which satisfies a number of minimum requirements: the writing must establish the fact of the transfer, the identity of the transferor and the transferee, the real estate and the nature of the interest being conveyed, and it must be signed.

Signed by the transferor, by the transferor's agent, or by a person authorized by law to execute the writing. This provision changes the rule of source section 1, which required that if the writing was signed by an agent, the agent's authority had to be in writing as well. A writing is sufficient under this section if it is signed by the transferor or by the transferor's agent, or by a person authorized by law to execute the writing. Good practice as well as the requirements of lenders, title insurance companies and grantees undoubtedly will continue to demand that an agent's authority be reduced to writing, but written authority will not be required to satisfy this statute. Questions concerning the validity and extent of a particular agent's authority will be dealt with under otherwise applicable law. See also proposed section 4, which also provides for signature by an agent of an agreement for the conveyance of an interest in real estate.

Note that other applicable principles of law may require that a writing transferring an interest in real estate satisfy additional requirements. For example, a deed signed by the transferor of property but not acknowledged would satisfy the requirements of this section but would not satisfy the requirements of the Recording Statute, R.S. 46:15-1.

Subsection (a) of this section incorporates judicial interpretations of the source statute to the effect that, in some cases, the owner of an interest in real estate who conveys an interest in land in a parol transaction may not take advantage of the rule that such a transaction is ineffective unless it is in writing. This is a very limited exception, applying only in those situations in which the transferor has placed the transferee in possession as a result of the parol transaction and the transferee has either paid consideration for the transfer or has detrimentally relied upon the validity of the transfer. The second situation, detrimental reliance, encompasses completed gift transactions.

Subsection (b) makes clear that the transferee in a parol transaction which does not satisfy the exception provided in subsection (a), e.g., because the transferee has not taken possession, may be able to enforce the transaction under proposed section 4 if the transaction involved an enforceable agreement and its terms can be proved by clear and convincing evidence. Under this section, a parol declaration of a trust will not suffice to transfer ownership of an interest in land. A parol trust may, however, be enforceable as an agreement under section 4 if it can be proved by clear and convincing evidence.

Subsection (c) removes leases from the compass of this section; they are governed by proposed Section 3.

Section 3 - Writing requirement, leases

A transaction is not enforceable as a lease of real estate for more than three years unless:

a. the real estate, the term of the lease and the identity of the lessor and the lessee are established in a writing signed by the lessor, by the lessor's agent, or by a person authorized by law to sign the writing; or

b. the real estate, the term of the lease and the identity of the lessor and the lessee are proved by clear and convincing evidence.

Source: R.S. 25:1-1, 25:1-5(d)

COMMENT

Section 1 of the source statute expressly included leases, and a lease has historically been considered to be an estate in land. In recent years, however, courts have struggled with the fact that modern leases, both residential and commercial, often have more of the characteristics of a contractual agreement than a conveyance of an estate. See, e.g., Sommer v. Kridel, 74 N.J. 446 (1977); Ringwood Associates, Ltd., v. Jack's of Route 23, 153 N.J. Super. 294 (Law Div. 1977). In the context of imposing a writing requirement, the hybrid nature of a lease becomes problematic as well. This problem is reflected in the cases decided under the source statute. In one nineteenth century case the court treated an unsigned lease as an executory contract where the lessee had taken possession, and granted the lessor damages for breach of the lease under the equitable doctrine of part performance. Wharton v. Stoutenburgh, 35 N.J. Eq. 266 (E. & A. 1882). An early twentieth century case refused to use a contractual analysis, however, and held that an unsigned lease for more than three years, under which the lessee had taken possession, paid rent, and made improvements, would not be enforced on contract principles. Clement v. Young-McShea, 69 N.J. Eq. 347 (Ch. 1905). Two recent cases have taken opposite points of view on the treatment of parol leases for more than three years. In Brechman v. Admar, 182 N.J. Super. 259 (Ch. Div. 1981) the court refused to enforce a lease for five years where there was a signed writing that did not satisfy the writing requirement of source section 1 because it did not include the commencement date or term of the lease. The court refused to allow testimony to prove those terms, and also refused to enforce the lease on part performance grounds because the acts taken by the lessee (payment of a deposit, hiring an architect, preparation of blueprints) were considered to be merely preparatory and not in performance of the lease. In Deutsch v. Budget Rent-A-Car, 213 N.J. Super. 385 (App. Div. 1986) the court enforced a partly-performed oral lease for more than three years where the lessee had taken possession and made substantial improvements. The court stated that part performance of the lease was relevant if the acts of part performance "provide a reliable indication that the parties have made an agreement of the general nature sought to be enforced." Proposed section 3 states a separate rule for leases, obviating the necessity to distinguish between their contract and conveyance aspects.

This section sets a different standard for enforceability of parol lease than is set in section 2 for a transaction involving an interest in land. Under proposed section 2 a parol conveyance of an interest in land is effective if the transferee has taken possession of the real estate. It is the Commission's view that in the context of determining whether a parol lease should be enforceable, possession by the lessee is only one factor which may be considered. Possession by a lessee is certainly probative of some lessor-lessee relationship, but possession of itself is likely to be ambiguous as to the length of the lease as well as to other lease terms. As a result, the Commission decided not to impose any single preclusive requirement such as possession for enforceability of a parol lease. See the parallel provision on enforcement of agreements, proposed section 4, which also rejects preclusive requirements for enforceability.

Commissioner Rosen favors an additional requirement - i.e., that the lessor has placed the lessee in possession - for the following reasons. First, cases which enforce parol leases cited above all involve fact situations in which the tenant had, in fact, been placed in possession of the premises. Second, in Commissioner Rosen's view, adding a requirement of possession would make the rule for leases consistent with that for conveyances in proposed section 2.

Section 4 - Enforceability of agreements regarding real estate

An agreement to transfer an interest in real estate or to hold an interest in real estate for the benefit of another is not enforceable unless:

a. the real estate, the nature of the interest to be transferred, the existence of the agreement, and the identity of the transferor and the transferee are established in a writing signed by the party against whom enforcement is sought, by that party's agent, or by a person authorized by law to sign the writing; or

b. the real estate, the nature of the interest to be transferred, the existence of the agreement and the identity of the transferor and the transferee are proved by clear and convincing evidence.

Source: R.S. 25:1-3, 25:1-4, 25:1-5(d)

COMMENT

This proposed section is intended to change significantly the statutory rule applicable to the enforcement of parol agreements involving real estate. The source statute provides that contracts for the sale of real estate are not enforceable unless they are in writing. The original purpose of the rule was to discourage the fraudulent assertion of contracts that were never made, but the courts realized soon after the Statute of Frauds was enacted that the strict application of the Statute sometimes resulted in the unjust repudiation of contracts that actually were made. The judicially-created exceptions to the writing requirement were developed to mediate the harsh results of strict enforcement but they have been inconsistently applied, resulting in uncertainty and confusion as to how the Statute will be applied in individual cases.

It is the Commission's view that a preclusive writing requirement is neither necessary nor desirable. The rule of the source statute was conceived before the development of modern concepts of evidence, when a party to an alleged contract was disqualified from testifying in court and thus was seriously hampered in repudiating an alleged contract that was never made; a preclusive writing requirement was a rational approach in that ancient context, but is no longer valid as a general approach to this category of agreements.

The Commission believes that the focus of inquiry in a situation involving an agreement for the sale of an interest in real estate or to hold an interest in real estate for the benefit of another should be whether an agreement has been made between the parties by which they intend to be bound. The intent of parties to be bound usually is manifested by a signed written agreement, but as the history of the Statute shows, in some circumstances parties enter into binding agreements without such a formal manifestation of their assent. Under this proposed section parol agreements are not enforceable unless they are in writing or unless they can be proved by clear and convincing evidence. Thus, if an agreement has not been reduced to a writing which satisfies the minimal requirements of this section, the agreement must be proved by a high standard of proof. The Commission considered and rejected the approach of codifying the traditional requirements of "part performance" or "detrimental reliance," as unnecessarily limiting. The history of the interpretation of the Statute of Frauds shows that courts have had to struggle to fit individual cases into the traditional exceptions, often doing violence to the principles of precedent and stare decisis, in order to achieve just results in cases in which it was clear that there was in fact an agreement between the parties. Equally troubling are the cases in which the courts, admitting the existence of an agreement between the parties, refused to enforce it because of the situation failed to fit precisely within one of the recognized exceptions, often on technical grounds.

It is important to note that this section of the proposed statute is stated in the negative; that is, an agreement is not enforceable unless it satisfies the writing requirement or unless it is proved by clear and convincing evidence. This proposed section sets a threshold requirement for enforceability but it does not include all of the requirements for enforceability which might be imposed by other applicable principles of law. Thus, for example, the fact that an agreement is manifested by a signed writing does not preclude a party from showing that one of the parties lacked the capacity to contract or that the enforcement of the agreement would be against public policy. Similarly, proof by clear and convincing evidence of all of the elements of a parol agreement outlined in this proposed section does not preclude a party from resisting the enforcement of the agreement by raising defenses such as lack of capacity or violation of public policy.

Clear and convincing evidence. This proposed section expressly requires that, in the absence of a writing, the existence of an agreement between the parties as well as its essential terms must be proved by clear and convincing evidence. The circumstances surrounding a transaction, the nature of the transaction, the relationship between the parties, their contemporaneous statements and prior dealings, if any, all are relevant to a determination of whether the parties made an agreement by which they intended to be bound. Thus, if the parties in question have been negotiating the sale of a multi-million dollar office building over many months through the exchange of a series of redrafted written contracts, it is unlikely that the parties intended to be bound other than in writing. Conversely, if the parties in question have engaged in a series of "handshake" agreements for the purchase and sale of individual building lots in the past, and have honored them in the absence of any writing, their prior conduct could tend to show that they intended to enter into a binding oral agreement. Intent to enter into a binding agreement might also be shown by the actions of the parties in performance of the agreement or even by actions defined in case law under the source statute as ancillary to the performance of the agreement. In Deutsch v. Budget Rent-A-Car, 213 N.J. Super. 385 (App. Div. 1986), the Appellate Division treated the part performance of a parol lease as evidence of the parties' agreement that the lease was for more than three years. The court commented that the doctrine of part performance should be applied to enforce a parol agreement "if part performance provides a reliable indication that the parties have made an agreement of the general nature sought to be enforced."

Consideration. Whether the consideration need be included in an agreement for the sale of land is unclear under present law. R.S. 25:1-8, which was not part of the original Statute of Frauds but was added in 1874, states a general rule that "the consideration of any promise, contract or agreement required to be put in writing by sections 25:1-1 to 25:1-7 of this title, need not be set forth or expressed in such writing, but may be proved by any other legal evidence." This would appear to provide that an agreement for the sale of an interest in land need not include the purchase price, but case law does not bear out this interpretation consistently. Compare Nibert v. Baghurst, 47 N.J. Eq. 201 (Ch. 1890) ("Since [the adoption of this section in 1874] it is not necessary that the consideration of a contract, coming within the statute, should be set out in the memorandum") with Johnson v. Lambert, 109 N.J. Eq. 88, 90 (E. & A. 1931) ("It is well settled that the memorandum in writing of a contract for sale of lands must contain the full terms of the contract--that is, the names of the buyer and seller, the subject of the sale, the price, the terms of credit, and the conditions of sale, if any there be.")(dicta). Under this proposed section the consideration need not be included in the writing establishing the agreement.

Commissioner Rosen believes that an agreement for the conveyance of an interest in real estate or to hold an interest in real estate for the benefit of another should not be enforceable solely because the agreement can be proved by clear and convincing evidence. In Commissioner Rosen's view, the present law requires also that there be present either part performance or detrimental reliance. These are additional and - in his view - essential equitable principles that justify departure from the requirement of a writing. To enforce parol agreements to convey, hold or lease real estate without compelling equitable circumstances, in Commissioner Rosen's opinion, would be contrary to the reasonable expectations of participants in real estate transactions and would encourage perjury in litigation.

Section 5 - Effect of unwritten transactions

Transactions involving an interest in real estate, leases of real estate, and agreements for the transfer of an interest in real estate or to hold an interest in real estate for the benefit of another, which are not established in a writing, are not effective against bona fide purchasers for valuable consideration without notice or lienors without notice.

COMMENT

Both under present law and under this proposed section there are circumstances under which unwritten transactions will affect the ownership of interest in real estate. Inherently such transactions are not recordable and thus they fall outside of the Recording Statute, leaving open the possibility that they may be effective against third parties. See Zwaska v. Irwin, 52 N.J. Super. 27 (Ch. Div. 1958)(parol trust in real estate defeated federal tax lien; Recording Statute does not affect rights in property which are not represented by a deed or instrument). This proposed section assures that unwritten transactions are no more efficacious against third parties than written but unrecorded transactions. This proposed section is intended to reverse the rule of Zwaska v. Irwin.

The Contracts Provisions of the Statute of Frauds

Section 4 of the English Statute of Frauds is one of a number of sections of the original statute that were concerned particularly with suppressing perjury.<sup>2</sup> That section, now section 5 of the New Jersey Statute, provided that "no action may be brought" upon any of five enumerated types of agreements unless the agreement was in writing or there was a written note or memorandum of it. The enumerated types of agreements were those by an executor or administrator of an estate to pay damages out of his own estate, agreements to answer for the debt of another, agreements made upon consideration of marriage, agreements for the sale of an interest in land (discussed above), and agreements not to be performed within a year from their making.

---

<sup>2</sup> Another provision of the English Statute which was concerned with suppressing perjury was section 17, which provided that no contract for the sale of goods of a value of more than ten pounds would be valid unless in writing or evidenced by a writing. Section 17 is the predecessor to Section 2-201 of the Uniform Commercial Code, R.S. 12A:2-201, which is outside of the scope of this project.

Although it is generally agreed that section 4 of the English statute was intended to suppress perjury,<sup>3</sup> this bare statement of purpose is not helpful in understanding why these particular categories of agreements were singled out for special treatment. With respect to promises of executors and administrators, it has been theorized these promises were included because it was much more common for such a promise to be made, and to be important, in the seventeenth century. Executors and administrators benefitted personally from estates, and there was little compulsion for them to make distributions from an estate. The wide discretion which they enjoyed, coupled with limitations upon the kinds of claims that could legally be made against an estate, made it more likely that an executor or administrator would make, or be claimed to have made, a personal promise to satisfy a claim.<sup>4</sup>

Contracts of suretyship and contracts not to be performed within a year may have been included because they were continuing contracts, which made them more susceptible to the defects in the judicial system of the time, and contracts for the sale of an interest in land, as well as contracts in consideration of marriage, which commonly involved the transfer of real property interests, were included as corollaries to the separate sections on interests in land.<sup>5</sup>

Given the lack of explanatory legislative history it is impossible to say whether specific policy choices motivated the adoption of the New Jersey version of the Statute of Frauds in 1794. It is more likely that the adoption of the Statute was part of the ongoing attempt during that formative period to replicate generally many of the aspects of the English legal system that were considered important. Moreover, it is difficult to say whether the same kinds of evidentiary problems affected litigation involving these kinds of claims in local courts of the time. What is clear is that concern with the assertion of unfounded claims based on oral agreements continued into the nineteenth century. This concern is evidenced by the virtually simultaneous addition of three entirely new provisions to the Statute of Frauds within a two-year period. All three sections paralleled section 4 of the English Statute in that they made certain kinds of promises unenforceable unless in writing. The first provision, enacted in 1873, concerned promises to pay a debt discharged in bankruptcy. Both of the other sections were enacted as part of the 1874 revision. These sections imposed a writing requirement on promises to pay debts contracted during infancy, and on real estate broker contracts. The provisions on real estate broker contracts, section 9 of the present statute, will be dealt with separately below. See proposed section 6 and comment.

---

<sup>3</sup> 6 W. Holdsworth, A History of English Law 379-93 (2d ed. reprinted 1977); accord Teeven, Seventeenth Century Evidentiary Concerns and the Statute of Frauds, 9 Adelaide L. Rev. 252 (1983). Holdsworth theorizes that the concern of the drafters with suppressing perjury arose out of the fact that rules of procedure and evidence were in transition at the time the Statute was adopted. Reaction to the defects in the jury system of the time had given rise to restrictions on the admission of certain kinds of testimony. In particular, the parties to an action frequently were not permitted to testify, leaving defendants unable to refute claims supported by perjured testimony. The approach of the Statute was to require certain types of transactions to be capable of proof only by a writing, to preclude wrongdoers from being able to prosecute a manufactured claim on the basis of perjured testimony alone.

<sup>4</sup> Holdsworth, supra at 390-93.

<sup>5</sup> Holdsworth, supra at 390-93.

Developments in law and in social policy have changed the context in which these provisions now operate, and each provision must be reconsidered individually in light of past experience and present circumstances. Modern commentators have identified three purposes, summarized in the Restatement (Second) of Contracts, which writing requirements may serve with respect to contracts, agreements and promises: a evidentiary purpose of providing "reliable evidence of the existence and terms of the contract"; a cautionary purpose of discouraging precipitous or "ill-considered" action; and a channeling function which "has helped to create a climate in which parties often regard their agreements as tentative until there is a signed writing." Restatement (Second) of Contracts, Statutory Note 281, 286.

Sections recommended for revision and retention:

R.S. 25:1 5(b) - Promise to Answer for the Debt of Another

Subsection 5(b) of the New Jersey Statute of Frauds provides that "A special promise to answer for the debt, default or miscarriage of another person" must be in writing in order to be enforceable. In a recent case involving a claim by a creditor that an officer of an insolvent corporation had agreed to be liable for the corporation's debt, the court commented that it was the fear of fabricated oral assurances in this type of situation which led to the inclusion of this subsection in the Statute.<sup>6</sup> The Restatement (Second) of Contracts adds that this subsection serves a "cautionary function of guarding the promisor against ill-considered action."<sup>7</sup>

The Commission recommends that this provision of the Statute be retained. It applies to a relatively narrow, definable class of promises which result in a person assuming responsibility for the underlying obligation of another. Because this type of promise is one in which by definition no consideration moves to the promisor, the cautionary and channeling functions of a writing requirement are particularly applicable. In some contexts, it also has an important consumer protection function.

Section 6 - Liability for the obligation of another.

A promise to be liable for the obligation of another person, in order to be enforceable, shall be in a writing signed by the person assuming the liability or by that person's agent. The consideration for the promise need not be stated in the writing.

Source: R.S. 25:1-5(a), 25:1-5(b), 25:1-8

COMMENT

Purpose of the provision. Like source section R.S. 25:1-5(b), this proposed section has an evidentiary purpose, Van Dam Egg Co. v. Allendale Farms, Inc., 199 N.J. Super. 452, 458-459 (App.Div. 1985)(the source section discourages fabricated claims); a cautionary purpose, Restatement (Second) of Contracts, Statutory Note at 281, 286 ("guarding the promisor against ill-

---

<sup>6</sup> Van Dam Egg Co. v. Allendale Farms, Inc., 199 N.J. Super. 452, 458-459 (App.Div. 1985).

<sup>7</sup> Restatement (Second) of Contracts sec. 112.

considered action") and a channeling function. Id. ("it has helped create a climate in which parties often regard their agreements as tentative until there is a signed writing.")

"Debt of another." The main issue upon which cases under this subsection turn is whether there is a "principal obligation 'of another' than the promisor. The promisor must promise as a surety for the principal obligor" in order for the promise to be within the Statute. Restatement (Second) of Contracts sec. 112, at 293. This provisions does not apply to a promise which amounts to a separate undertaking which involves new consideration and is largely for the promisor's personal benefit. Restatement (Second) of Contracts sec. 112, at 293; Schoor Associates v. Holmdel Heights Construction Co., 68 N.J. 95, 106 (1975).

An early statement of the general rule concerning the types of promises that fall within the Statute's writing requirement is that such promises are collateral, they secondarily obligate the promisor, and they lack new consideration. Thus, where two persons promised to sign a note to pay a third person's debt, where no new consideration moved to them, the promise to sign the note was unenforceable. Wills v. Shinn, 42 N.J.L. 138, 140 (Sup. Ct. 1880). Within this general rule, courts have developed various tests to determine the applicability of the Statute. In the most recent New Jersey Supreme Court opinion on this subject the court discussed the various tests and applied the "leading object or main purpose rule":

When the leading object of the promise or agreement is to become guarantor or surety to the promisee for a debt for which a third party is and continues to be primarily liable, the agreement, whether made before or after or at the time with the promise of the principal, is within the statute, and not binding unless evidenced by writing. On the other hand, when the leading object of the promisor is to subserve some interest or purpose of his own, notwithstanding the effect is to pay or discharge the debt of another, his promise is not within the statute.

Schoor Associates v. Holmdel Heights Construction Co., 68 N.J. 95, 106 (1975). In adopting this rule, the court considered and rejected a number of other tests that have been applied by courts or supported by commentators, including the credit test utilized in Romano v. Brown, and the surety test "supported by Professor Williston and others." Id. at 104.

Novations. Because the promise must be one to be a surety, the statute does not apply to novations. See Emerson N.Y. - N.J., Inc. v. Brookwood T.V., 122 N.J. Super. 288, 295 (Law Div. 1973) where the court defined a novation as a transaction "whereby one person promises to assume the debt of another in consideration that the original debtor be discharged therefrom, and the creditor substitutes the promisor in place of the original debtor and extinguishes his debt." In order for a novation to be accomplished, "The discharge of the debtor must be full and complete, operating as an extinguishment of the debt at the time the new promise is made, and as a consideration therefor; but an agreement whereby one guarantor or surety is substituted for another is not within the statute of frauds, although the obligation of the original debtor is not extinguished." 122 N.J. Super. at 295.

Releases. This subsection does not apply to releases. Emerson v. N.Y. - N.J., Inc. v. Brookwood T.V., 122 N.J. Super. 288, 293 (Law Div. 1973). The court commented that "The statute applies to `a special promise to answer for the debt, default or miscarriage of another person' (N.J.S.A. 25:1-5(b)) but it is silent concerning a release from such a promise. Therefore, although a writing may have been required for the guaranty originally, a release from that obligation could be accomplished orally, notwithstanding the statute of frauds."

Executors and administrators. The Commission is recommending repeal of subsection 5(a) of the present statute, R.S. 25:1-5(c) (see discussion below), which requires a writing to enforce the promise of an executor or administrator to be liable for the debt of an estate. Such promises, to the extent that they constitute promises to be liable for the obligation of another, will fall under this proposed section.

Consideration. The provision that the consideration for a promise falling under this section need not be stated in the writing is taken from R.S. 25:1-8. See further discussion of the history of that provision below.

R.S. 25:1-5(c) - Agreements Made Upon Consideration of Marriage

Subsection 5(c) requires a writing to enforce a contract made upon consideration of marriage, that is, a promise in which part or all of the consideration is marriage or a promise to marry. The basic principle of this subsection, that agreements made in consideration of marriage must be in writing in order to be enforceable, has been litigated through the years in factually diverse situations.<sup>8</sup> This subsection has been held not to bar the enforcement of parol agreements between unmarried couples, because the consideration in such cases is not marriage but services rendered in return for promises of future support.<sup>9</sup>

This category of agreements may have been included in the English Statute because they typically involved transfers of real property interests and thus requiring a writing was consistent with the conveyancing and other land sections.<sup>10</sup> In the modern context this provision serves the evidentiary, cautionary and channeling purposes identified as supporting the imposition of a writing requirement.<sup>11</sup>

The Uniform Premarital Agreement Act, C. 37:2-31 to -41, supersedes this subsection with respect to premarital agreements executed on and after its effective date. In addition to imposing a writing requirement on premarital agreements, the Uniform Act imposes additional formal requirements and substantive limitations as well. Subsection 5(c) will continue to be applicable, however, to premarital agreements entered into prior to the effective date of the Uniform Act, and therefore it will be of importance for many years to come. The

---

<sup>8</sup> The statute has been held to bar actions on parol promises made in consideration of marriage by a wife who agreed to apply her assets to expenses of her future husband and herself if he would marry her at an early date, Alexander v. Alexander, 96 N.J. Eq. 10, 14 (Ch. 1924); by a prospective spouse to adopt the other spouse's child, Elmer v. Wellbrook, 110 N.J. Eq. 15, 18 (Ch. 1932); by a husband to convey his dwelling to his wife after marriage, Herr v. Herr, 13 N.J. 79, 87 (1953); by a husband to give his prospective bride a home and a housekeeper, Gilbert v. Gilbert, 66 N.J. Super. 246, 251-252 (App. Div. 1961); by a wife that her husband's mother would come from Hungary and live with them, Koch v. Koch, 95 N.J. Super. 546, 550 (App. Div. 1967). This subsection barred a wife from claiming a death benefit from the husband's employer on the basis of a parol antenuptial agreement, where the husband's niece was a properly-named beneficiary. Pennsylvania Railroad Co. v. Warren, 69 N.J. Eq. 706, 709 (Ch. 1905), and also barred a wife from varying the terms of her husband's will by parol testimony of an antenuptial agreement. Russell v. Russell, 60 N.J. Eq. 282 (Ch. 1900), aff'd, 63 N.J. Eq. 282 (E. & A. 1901).

<sup>9</sup> Kozlowski v. Kozlowski, 164 N.J. Super. 162, 177 (Ch. Div. 1978), aff'd, 80 N.J. 378 (1979); Crowe v. Degoia, 203 N.J. Super. 22, 34 (App. Div. 1985), aff'd, 102 N.J. 50 (1986).

<sup>10</sup> W. Holdsworth, supra, at 392.

<sup>11</sup> See Manning v. Riley, 52 N.J. Eq. 39 (Ch. 1893) ("The purpose of the statute is ... to render hasty and inconsiderate oral promises, made to induce marriage, without legal force, and thus to give protection against the consequences of rashness and folly.").

Commission therefore recommends that subsection 5(c) of the present statute be retained as part of the codified law, and amended to clearly reflect the fact that it has been prospectively superseded by the Uniform Act.

R.S. 25:1-5. Promises or agreements not binding unless in writing

No action shall be brought upon any of the following agreements or promises, unless the agreement or promise, upon which such action shall be brought or some memorandum or note thereof, shall be in writing, and signed by the party to be charged therewith, or by some other person thereunto by him lawfully authorized:

[a. A special promise of an executor or administrator to answer damages out of his own estate;

b. A special promise to answer for the debt, default or miscarriage of another person;]

c. An agreement made upon consideration of marriage entered into prior to the effective date of the Uniform Premarital Agreement Act, P.L.1988, c.99;

d. A contract or sale of real estate, or any interest in or concerning the same; or

e. An agreement that is not to be performed within one year from the making thereof].<sup>12</sup>

Sections recommended to be repealed:

R.S. 25:1-5(a) Promise of an executor or administrator

Subsection 5(a) of the present New Jersey Statute of Frauds requires a writing to enforce an agreement of an executor or administrator to be personally liable for damages. The Commission recommends that this subsection be repealed. Unlike the situation which obtained in the seventeenth century, the responsibilities of fiduciaries to satisfy the claims of creditors and other claimants, and the manner in which those claims are to be satisfied, are covered in detail in the Probate Code.<sup>13</sup> Under present circumstances this subsection is an anomaly in that it treats separately one class of fiduciaries, while promises by other kinds of fiduciaries to be personally liable for debts are covered under subsection 5(b).<sup>14</sup>

<sup>12</sup> The amended statute would then read:

"No action shall be brought upon any of the following agreements or promises, unless the agreement or promise, upon which such action shall be brought or some memorandum or note thereof, shall be in writing, and signed by the party to be charged therewith, or by some other person thereunto by him lawfully authorized:

c. An agreement made upon consideration of marriage entered into prior to the effective date of the Uniform Premarital Agreement Act, P.L.1988, c.99."

<sup>13</sup> See, e.g., Title 3B, chapter 22 (payment and proof of claims).

<sup>14</sup> See Remington v. Lauter Piano Co., 8 N.J. Misc. 257 (Sup. Ct. 1930)(attorney for trustee liable to pay broker's commission on parol promise because promise was independent undertaking not within Subsection 5(b)); Gallagher v. McBride, 66 N.J.L. 360 (Sup. Ct. 1901)(guardian liable for

The Commission believes that a separate section for this class of fiduciaries is unnecessary,<sup>15</sup> and that agreements by executors and administrators to be personally liable for the obligations of an estate should be treated under proposed section 6, set forth above, as a subspecies of agreements to be liable for the obligation of another.<sup>16</sup>

R.S. 25:1-5(e) - Contracts Not to be Performed Within One Year of Their Making

Subsection 5(e) of the New Jersey Statute of Frauds provides that "[a]n agreement that is not to be performed within one year from the making thereof" must be in writing in order to be enforceable. It has been theorized that this provision was included in the English Statute because, like the provision concerning surety agreements, it is a type of continuing contract which by its nature is more susceptible to the problems of proof which existed in the court system of the time. In Deevy v. Porter, decided by the Supreme Court in 1953, the court in a case involving this subsection commented of the Statute generally that "[i]t was intended to guard against the perils of perjury and error in the spoken word ... and to protect defendants against unfounded and fraudulent claims."<sup>17</sup> The court also referred to an early opinion of an English court which described the policy of the statute as being to prevent "the leaving to memory the terms of a contract for longer time than a year."<sup>18</sup>

Both courts and secondary authorities have commented that the peculiar language chosen by the drafters of the Statute has not served their purpose well because many long-term contracts or continuing contracts have been held to fall outside the Statute.<sup>19</sup> The Restatement Second of Contracts suggests that the inutility of the chosen language has led to a tendency to construe this subsection narrowly.<sup>20</sup>

The Commission recommends that this subsection be repealed as its language prescribes an arbitrary and illogical class that includes only some long-term contracts. While requiring a writing in the case of long-term contracts serves a salutary evidentiary purpose in a generalized way, the poorly-defined outlines of the present subsection may defeat the legitimate expectations of parties to some long-term contracts and may facilitate the repudiation of otherwise legitimate contractual obligations as often as it prevents the assertion of unfounded claims. The Commission believes that the imposition of a writing supplies delivered to ward notwithstanding subsection 5(b) because debt was incurred directly by guardian).

---

<sup>15</sup> Only two cases were found which apply this subsection. Cochrane v. McEntee, 51 A. 279, 280 (Ch. 1896)(a claim against the estate of a decedent, on the basis of the decedent's oral promise to pay a claim against her husband's estate, was disallowed because it came within this subsection); and Sabo v. Crooks, 65 N.J. Super. 260, 261-262 (App. Div. 1961)(appeal remanded for inquiry into possible defense under this section to debt incurred by defendant's husband before his death).

<sup>16</sup> See Restatement (Second) of Contracts, sec. 111, which describes agreements of executors and administrators as a subspecies of agreements to be a surety.

<sup>17</sup> Deevy v. Porter, 11 N.J. 594, 595-96 (1953).

<sup>18</sup> Deevy v. Porter, 11 N.J. at 597.

<sup>19</sup> Deevy v. Porter, 11 N.J. at 596-97 (discussing the historical rationale for this subsection and the various criticisms levelled against it); Restatement (Second) of Contracts sec. 130.

<sup>20</sup> Restatement (Second) of Contracts sec. 130.

requirement should be reserved for more clearly-defined classes of contracts and agreements such as those outlined in the retained provisions.

R.S. 25:1-6 - Ratification of Debts Contracted As a Minor

Section 6 of the New Jersey Statute of Frauds provides that "No action shall be maintained to charge any person upon any promise, made after full age, to pay any debt contracted during infancy, to which infancy would be a defense, unless such promise be put in writing and signed by the party to be charged therewith." Simply put, this section provides that a person cannot be sued on a promise made as an adult to pay for a debt incurred as a minor, if minority would have been a defense, unless the promise was in writing and signed by the person making the promise. This section was adopted in 1874;<sup>21</sup> there is no counterpart to it in the original English Statute of Frauds.

The Commission recommends that this section be repealed as it has little continuing importance.<sup>22</sup> This section is concerned only with ratification of debts as to which minority is a defense, a class of debts which have become greatly circumscribed in the course of this century. The age of majority for purposes of contractual capacity has been lowered to 18, R.S. 9:17B-1, and the common law rule that a minor is liable only when contracting for "necessaries" has been interpreted to allow recovery for the sale of a wide variety of goods and services, depending upon the facts of the case.<sup>23</sup> Minors have also been held liable for debts contracted when they misrepresented their age.<sup>24</sup> Moreover, in those cases in which minority is a defense the minor may be required to make restitution for goods and services received.<sup>25</sup> The development of a policy which favors holding minors liable for debts in a wider set of circumstances mitigates against the retention of a special rule governing ratification of a minor's debts.

R.S. 25:1-7 - Promise to Pay a Debt Discharged in Bankruptcy

This section of the New Jersey Statute of Frauds provides that no action may be brought against a person for any promise to pay a debt from which he "was or shall be" discharged under federal bankruptcy law "unless such promise be made after such discharge, and be put in writing and signed by the party to be charged therewith." This section was adopted in 1874, Rev. 1874, p. 299, sec. 8, to change the common law rule that a parol promise by a bankrupt to pay after discharge revived the debt. There was no counterpart of this Section in the original English Statute of Frauds.

The Commission recommends that this section be repealed as it has been preempted by federal bankruptcy law. The present federal law concerning revival of debts discharged in bankruptcy is contained in subsections 524(c) and

<sup>21</sup> Rev. 1874 p.229, An Act for the prevention of frauds and perjuries, §7.

<sup>22</sup> Only two cases actually construe this Section of the Statute, West v. Prest, 98 N.J.L. 209 (E. & A. 1922) and Parker v. Hayes, 39 N.J. Eq. 469 (Ch. 1885).

<sup>23</sup> E.g., Bancredit, Inc. v. Bethea, 65 N.J. Super. 538, 549 (App. Div. 1961).

<sup>24</sup> E.g., Manasquan v. Savings and Loan Assn v. Mayer, 98 N.J. Super. 163, 164 (App. Div. 1967); R.J. Georke Co. v. Nicolson, 5 N.J. Super. 412, 416 (App. Div. 1949).

<sup>25</sup> See, e.g., Boyce v. Doyle, 113 N.J. Super. 240 (Law Div. 1971), Pemberton B. & L. Assn v. Adams, 53 N.J. Eq. 258 (Ch. 1895); Carter v. Jays Motors, Inc., 3 N.J. Super. 82 (App. Div. 1949);

524(d) of the Bankruptcy Code.<sup>26</sup> These provisions allow the reaffirmation of discharged debts only with court approval. Such reaffirmations are not effective unless made prior to discharge and the debtor has up to sixty days after the agreement is filed in court to rescind. If the debtor was not represented by an attorney, the court will not enforce a reaffirmation agreement unless the court finds that the agreement is in the debtor's best interest. Because the federal statute affords a bankrupt far greater protection than the New Jersey provision, section 7 of the New Jersey Statute of Frauds is a nullity.

R.S. 25:1-8 - Consideration Not Expressed in Writing

This section was added in 1874, apparently to reverse judicial decisions which had held that the writing required to enforce a promise to be liable for the debt of another under the predecessor to R.S. 25:1-5(b) must contain a statement of the consideration for the promise.<sup>27</sup> The added provision was not limited to promises to be liable for the debt of another, however, but to all sections of the Statute. See Rev. 1874, p. 301, sec. 9. The applicability of the added provision to all required writings under the act rather than only to a writing with respect to liability for the debt of another may have been inadvertent. It was applied to contracts for the sale of land for a time, see Nibert v. Baghurst, 47 N.J. Eq. 201 (Ch. 1890), but later cases on contracts for the sale of land seem to ignore it. E.g. Johnson v. Lambert, 109 N.J. Eq. 88, 90 (E. & A. 1931). The Commission is recommending that this provision not apply to contracts for the sale of land. See proposed section 4 and Comment. The principle of the source section is retained, however, in proposed section 6, the revised version of the source section on promises to be liable for the debt of another.

The Real Estate Broker Provisions of the Statute of Frauds

The provision regulating contracts with real estate brokers is essentially a consumer protection law. The source statute serves to protect the public from "fraud, incompetence, misinterpretation, sharp or unconscionable practice." Ellsworth Dobbs, Inc. v. Johnson, 50 N.J. 528, 553 (1967); Small v. Seldows Stationary, 617 F.2d 992, 996 (3d Cir. 1980). It also discourages agents or brokers from contracting land sales meant to bind owners, unless owners confer written authority. Sadler v. Young, 78 N.J.L. 594, 597 (E. & A. 1910). By preventing overreaching and misunderstanding, the section aids real estate brokers as well as owners. The same reasons that give this provision continued vitality support its extension into broker contracts unrelated to the sale of real estate: contracts with real estate brokers concerning leases and the transfer of other interests in real property and contracts with business brokers.

The Commission recommends retaining and broadening the real estate broker commission provision of the Statute of Frauds and clarifying and simplifying its language.

---

<sup>26</sup> See the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1978, 92 Stat. 2549.

<sup>27</sup> See Restatement (Second) of Contracts sec. 131, comment h and Nibert v. Baghurst, 47 N.J. Eq. 201 (Ch. 1890).

Section 7. Commissions of real estate broker and business broker; writing required

a. (1) Real estate broker is a licensed real estate broker or other person performing the services of a real estate agent or broker.

(2) Business broker is a person who negotiates the purchase or sale of a business. "Negotiates" includes identifies, provides information concerning, or procures an introduction to prospective parties, or assists in the negotiation or consummation of the transaction. Purchase or sale of a business includes the purchase or sale of good will or of the majority of voting interest in a corporation, and of a major part of inventory or fixtures not in the ordinary course of the transferor's business.

b. Except as provided in subsection (d), a real estate broker who acts as agent or broker on behalf of a principal for the conveyance of an interest in real estate, including lease interests for less than 3 years, is entitled to a commission only if before or after the conveyance the authority of the broker is given or recognized in a writing signed by the principal or the principal's authorized agent, and the writing states either the amount or the rate of commission. In this subsection, the interest of a mortgagee or lienor is not an interest in real estate.

c. Except as provided in subsection (d), a business broker is entitled to a commission only if before or after the sale of the business, the authority of the broker is given or recognized in a writing signed by the seller or buyer or authorized agent, and the writing states either the amount or the rate of commission.

d. A broker who acts pursuant to an oral agreement is entitled to a commission only if:

(1) within five days after making the oral agreement and before the conveyance, the broker serves the principal with a written notice which states that its terms are those of the prior agreement including the rate or amount of commission to be paid; and

(2) before the principal serves the broker with a written rejection of the oral agreement, the broker either effects the conveyance or, in good faith, enters negotiations with a prospective party who later effects the conveyance.

e. The notices provided for personally, or by registered or certified mail, at the last known address of the person to be served.

e. The notices provided for

Source: R.S. 25:1-9

COMMENT

The proposed section is based on R.S. 25:1-9, with the language adjusted to reflect court interpretations of the source section.

The Commission proposal incorporates judicial constructions in two instances. While the source statute refers only to "a broker or real estate agent," the Court has concluded "that all who sell or exchange real estate for or on account of the owner." are included. O'Connor v. Bd. of Com'rs of West Orange, 39 N.J. Super. 230, 234-235 (Law Div. 1956). Hence the inclusion in subsection (a)(1) of the phrase, "or other person."

In subsection (d)(1), the phrase, "terms are those of the prior agreement" brings the statute in accord with decisional law which requires an explicit indication of an oral agreement as well as inclusion of the oral agreement's terms. Soloff v. Atlantic Coast Bldg. and Loan Assn., 10 N.J. Misc. 1150, 1151-1152 (Sup. Ct. 1932), affd, 110 N.J.L. 528 (E. & A. 1933); Fontana v. Polish National Alliance, 130 N.J.L. 503, 509 (E. & A. 1943); Smith v. Cyprus Industrial Minerals Co., 178 N.J. Super. 7, 11 (App. Div. 1981). The courts read the source statute as not requiring use of the word "agreement" in the notice. Myers v. Buff, 45 N.J. Super. 318, 321 (App. Div. 1957). The revised section is compatible with that reading.

The Commission recommends broadening the scope of the statute. The source statute applies only when the broker acts on behalf of an owner-seller of real estate. Tanner Associates, Inc. v. Ciraldo, 33 N.J. 51, 67 (1960). The Commission proposal expands the coverage of the section in two ways. First, the proposed section applies to a broker for either party to any conveyance of an interest in real estate. Both "conveyance" and "interest in real estate" are defined in proposed section 1. As a result of the inclusiveness of the definitions, the proposed section affects contracts with brokers relating to the sale or lease of property as well as to other transactions less directly touching real estate: such as the transfer of interests in a co-operative, or the sale of time shares in property. Unlike the source statute, it applies equally to the transferor and transferee of the interest. The only limitation to the inclusiveness of the proposed statute is the exception for interests of a mortgagee or lienor. The Commission intends to exclude mortgage brokers from the requirements of the statute.

The source statute does not apply to a sale of a business. Bierman v. Liebowitz, 3 N.J. Super. 202, 204 (App. Div. 1949). The Commission proposal, subsection (c) specifically includes these transactions. The same considerations which justify a writing requirement for real estate broker contracts support its extension to business broker contracts. The varying roles of business brokers increases the need for the definition of the relationship in a written document. Since the commission charged by business brokers is often higher than the customary commission of real estate brokers, the importance of unfounded and multiple claims, or of the evasion of just claims, can be great.

The extension of the provision to business brokers requires new definitions in subsection (a)(2). The definitions of "business broker", "negotiates", and "purchase or sale of a business", are based on comparable statutes in Massachusetts (Mass. Ann. Laws ch.259, §7) and New York (N.Y. General Obligations Law §5-701(10)). The inclusion of purchase or sale of "a major part of inventory or fixtures not in the ordinary course of the transferor's business" is derived from the definition of "bulk transfer" in N.J.S. 12A:6-102(1).

TABLE OF DISPOSITIONS

SECTION	DISPOSITION
R.S. 25:1-1	Proposed Sections 1,2,3,4
R.S. 25:1-2	Proposed Sections 1,2,3,4
R.S. 25:1-3	Proposed Sections 1,2,3, 4
R.S. 25:1-4	Proposed Sections 1,2,3,4
R.S. 25:1-5(a)	Proposed Section 6
R.S. 25:1-5(b)	Proposed Section 6
R.S. 25:1-5(c)	Amended
R.S. 25:1-5(d)	Proposed Sections 1,2,3,4
R.S. 25:1-5(e)	Recommended for repeal
R.S. 25:1-6	Recommended for repeal
R.S. 25:1-7	Recommended for repeal
R.S. 25:1-8	Proposed Section 6
R.S. 25:1-9	Proposed Section 7